Inspectors' warning to new hospital over shock A&Efindings

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

TUNBRIDGE Wells' new state-of-theart hospital has come under fire from a health watchdog after A&E patients suffering major injuries were left waiting in corridors due to a lack of beds.

During an unannounced inspection of the accident and emergency department by the Care Quality Commission (CQC) last month, three ambulance crews were seen waiting with patients, unable to transfer them into the major injury unit.

The shocking findings at the new £230 million hospital in Pembury – which opened in January last year – were revealed in a report released by the CQC this week.

The A&E department serves Tunbridge Wells, Tonbridge, Sevenoaks and the surrounding area stretching across parts of mid-Kent and to villages on the outskirts of Maidstone.

It is the latest blow to health chiefs, who have come under fire for the controversial Private Finance Initiative (PFI) scheme used to fund the hospital's construction, which commits the trust to a huge £20 million in payments every year for the next 32 years.

The report found staffing levels and care and welfare of patients to be insufficient in the A&E department – which opened five months ago when the Kent & Sussex Hospital closed for the final time.

Inspectors also stated that waiting times were subject to significant delays.

Two warning notices calling for immediate improvements have been issued to Maidstone and Tunbridge Wells NHS Trust stating that it was in breach

Drought alert as levels fall

A WORRYING drop in water levels at Bewl reservoir in Lamberhurst has contributed to the area being confirmed as on drought alert after rain fall levels left supplies depleted. It means we can expect a string of restrictions this summer unless there is heavy rain over coming weeks.

HEALTH CARE

Trust insists A&E improvements have already been made of two of the government's essential standards for care and treatment.

Inspectors said they were concerned the trust was not taking appropriate steps to make sure people experienced safe and appropriate care that met their needs.

While clinical staffing problems in the minor injury unit were attributed to staff having been transferred to the major injury unit, inspectors found that unit to also be understaffed.

NHS workers told inspectors that while staffing levels were sufficient on an average day. they admitted struggling on busy days.

They also raised concerns the skill mix was not always right and that staff were spread out across the department.

Deputy director of COC in the south, Ian Biggs, said it was clear that patients visiting A&E at the hospital – hailed as one of the best in Europe - had to wait too long for attention.

"Providers have a duty to make sure the care and treatment they deliver meets essential standards," he said.

"This warning sends a clear message that the issues at the Tunbridge Wells Hospital at Pembury need to be addressed as a matter of priority.

"The trust has accepted the findings of inspectors and has told COC they are taking action to make the improvements required. Our inspectors will return in the near future to carry out another unannounced inspection.

"If we find that the trust is not making the required progress we will consider further use of our enforcement powers to protect the people who depend on this service.

Maidstone and Tunbridge Wells NHS Trust said it had made immediate changes to improve patient care which had helped the hospital respond faster to peaks in demand for A&E services.

Medical director Dr Paul Sigston said: "Our A&E is a safe and high quality department. The changes we have made are helping to make it a swifter department for more patients when we are at our busiest.

"By working with the COC. we have quickly improved both the way we identify potential peaks in patient demand, and respond to these by calling in additional doctors and nurses as necessary.

The trust admitted that although patients were medically supervised in A&E, some waited too long for different aspects of care to be completed before being discharged home or admitted into hospital.

Health bosses increased the number of doctors and nurses working in the department after it opened in September 2011 and following the inspection said they had focused on improving its escalation system for bringing in staff to help cope with peaks in demand.

The trust said more doctors and nurses were now automatically called in if the number of the historic

patients exceeded a particular level within a specific period of time. It added that patients were checked every two hours by a lead doctor and nurse to ensure care was progressing.

Dr Sigston said: "There are times when some patients will need to spend longer in A&E and that will continue to be the case for good clinical reasons.

"Some of our systems were not as robust as they are now, however, and we apologise to any of our patients who previously waited longer than absolutely necessary to complete all of their care.

"We are continually improving the care we provide to A&E patients, and patients who come to the new hospital can expect a high quality, safe and reliable service.

Traders arrange season of fun to keep shoppers entertained on the Pantiles

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

TRADERS on the Pantiles have unveiled details of their summer events season which they hope will help continue to draw in visitors.

Among the key events will be a special Easter fun weekend, a return of the hugely popular food and drink festival, and a special street party to celebrate the Queen's Jubilee.

The calendar has been lined up by the Association of Pantiles Traders, which is transforming the fortunes of the shopping parade.

Kicking off at Easter, there will be an egg hunt running across the weekend along with a colouring competition and bouncy castle.

May heralds the Pantiles Food & Drink Festival. Last year's inaugural event attracted some 15,000 visitors with a host of stalls showcasing gour-

TV chef and owner of Thackeray's restaurant, Richard Phillips will be patron of the event, with some 50 market stalls expected.

Taking place on May 19-20, it is also supported by Produced in Kent and Kent County Council.

As last year, an al fresco demonstration kitchen, constructed on the bandstand, will form the centrepiece of the Festooned with red, white and blue bunting throughout the summer season, the Pantiles will give more than a nod to the main national events of 2012, the Oueen's Diamond Jubilee and the Olympics.

The extended jubilee weekend running from June 2-5 will feature the Pantiles markets on the Saturday and Sunday. A street party will also take place on the Sunday, forming part of national initiative The Big Jubilee Lunch.

The Oueen's Pantiles Garden Party is a new event. In the wake of the Chelsea Flower Show, The Pantiles aims to play host to the ultimate plant sale, heralding a riot of floral colour on the Monday and Tuesday.

In June the fashion festival returns and the Vintage Fair will also be back Richard Simm, chair of the Association of Pantiles Traders, said: "The traders hope to build on the successes of last vear's season: with our second food festival, niche themed markets, and three vintage events.

"The Pantiles is a seven-day-a-week, year-round shopping destination – but these specialist events underline what we do really well.

Sex offenders released without any treatment

By Ed Hill

ed.hill@archant.co.uk

MAIDSTONE prison is releasing sex offenders back into the community without giving them any treatment that might stop them attacking again.

The prison has nearly 600 inmates, mainly sex offenders and foreign prisoners.

A report from the Chief Inspector of Prisons Nick Hardwick also criticises the jail for not doing enough to tackle bullying, or providing good enough services for foreign inmates.

He said: "Although the risks posed by some prisoners were well managed, they were not effectively reduced. There were insufficient places on sex offender programmes to meet the needs of the population. This meant too many prisoners were released into the community without their behaviour being effectively challenged.

"Although sex offender programmes are not a panacea, they do reduce the risk an individual will reoffend, this shortage was a significant concern."

The report suggests around 100 inmates are on a waiting list for rehabilitation courses.

Kent county councillor Malcolm Robertson, who represents Maidstone Central, said: "The whole purpose of Maidstone jail becoming a specialist centre was to put them all in one place and concentrate on

"If there are inadequate resources to do that then it is a very sad and worrying situation. This is not satisfactory in a civil society."

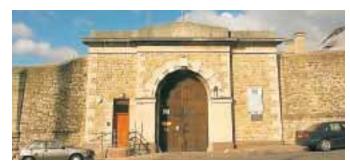

treatment and rehabilitation.

The report also said many foreign inmates felt they were treated badly compared to their British counterparts and although some working programmes were good there were not enough, leaving prisoners beared and with next included.

bored and with nothing to do. Mr Hardwick said: "Prisoners in our survey reported high levels of victimisation from other prisoners.

"Foreign national prisoners complained vigorously to us that they were treated less favourably than British national prisoners and the prison could not produce monitoring evidence to refute this. There was no dedicated foreign national co-ordinator and there was a striking lack of even essential translated material."

However, the jail was praised for some of the innovative work it carried out, and many fundamental issues such as prisoners' health and the relationship between warders and inmates were described as good.

Integrating foreign prisoners with sex offenders had proved a success, drug use was low, and prisoners were well managed.

Cllr Robertson said: "Good work has been done there in the past and I suspect financial cutbacks are leading to this situation. These sorts of Cinderella services do get ignored but we ignore them at our peril. It may be an easy way of saving money but it can leads to disastrous results later on."

Michael Spurr, chief executive officer of the National Offender Management Service, which manages prisons, said: "The governor and his staff are working hard to address the areas where the inspector found that improvement was required, including specialist provisions for sex offenders and foreign nationals.

→ Jail for cowardly attack

WILLIAM Stone, 21, of Perch Close, Larkfield, has been jailed for six years after assaulting a former friend with a wheel brace in Maidstone.

On September 11, 2010, Stone hit the victima 20 year-old man – a number of times on the head from behind with a wheel brace. The assault was interrupted by an off-duty police officer. Among the victim's injuries was a three-inch head wound which required stitches.

Stone admitted wounding with intent.

→ Animals are TV stars

WILDWOOD'S animals are to appear in the new CBBC series of Dick and Dom Go Wild! which begins on Monday. The comedy duo visited some of the UK's busiest wildlife centres to encourage children to get more involved with wildlife. Wildwood's animals, including beavers, wolves, horses, snakes and polecats, feature in nine episodes. The filming, which took place at the Herne Bay centre in 2011, caused a stir when visitors were able to meet the TV duo.

Child, two, left in library

A MOTHER was being questioned by police officers this week after a young girl was left in a pushchair at a Folkestone library.

The child, believed to be aged two to threeyears-old, was discovered by library staff in Grace Hill as they closed up for the day on Wednesday.

Police were called at around 6pm and officers launched a hunt for the mother.

The woman was found safe and well later in the evening, and was taken to a police station for questioning by officers.

MURDER

Police 'open minded' about new Aspinall and Lord Lucan claims

SCOTLAND Yard says it is keeping an "open mind" over the infamous murder case involving fugitive aristocrat Lord Lucan, pictured.

It follows allegations made in BBC programme Inside Out that the peer – known as John Bingham – was helped by Howletts Wild Animal Park founder John Aspinall to see his children.

Lucan fled London in 1974 after murdering his children's nanny, believing it to be his estranged wife.

The recent claims – dismissed as "rubbish" by Lucan's wife – were made by the former secretary of Aspinall. The millionaire ran a casino in London with James Goldsmith.

The woman – who refused to be identified – said that between 1979-81 she booked flights for two of Lucan's children to holiday in Africa, where they were then flown to the Gabon so Lucan would be able to see them from afar.

The story was backed up by a former police investigator who believed Lucan had been spotted in Africa.

The claims, if true, dispel speculation that Lucan, who was close friends with Aspinall, the founder of Howletts in Canterbury and Port Lympne near Hythe, threw himself off a ferry.

mpne near Hytne, threw himself off a ferry. Years of mystery surround the whereabouts of Lucan, who fled London after the grisly murder. His car was discovered in Newhaven, suggesting he had committed suicide in the English Channel. But his body was never found, leading to the idea that his friends Aspinall, who died in 2000, and Goldsmith helped him flee to Africa.

In the documentary, Aspinall's former PA said she was told to arrange flights for Lucan's children. She also claimed Aspinall sent her a "hidden message" during one of his last interviews, saying Lucan was dead. She added she was happy to give a "full and frank" statement to police.

A Scotland Yard spokesman said: "We are keeping an open mind. We wouldn't be able to discuss who comes to us with information."

Since the BBC report aired this week, Lucan's 74-year-old widow dismissed the claims, saying: "It's rubbish, I can guarantee they didn't go to Africa. It's ridiculous, it's false."

She says Lucan hurled himself off a cross-Channel ferry – and straight into the propellers so no trace of him would be found.

A far-fetched rumour started by the tabloids in 1974 reported Lucan had fled to Howletts and begged Aspinall to feed him to the lions.

'Speeding drivers good source of police funds'

By Ed Hill

ed.hill@archant.co.uk

A MAN who made a multi-million pound fortune on the property market says he has the financial skills to help run Kent Police.

Fergus Wilson, 63, and his wife Judith made their fortune building a large portfolio on the buy-to-let market.

The former maths teacher from Maidstone now wants to be elected as the new police commissioner for the county.

He said: "I was concerned about the amount of petty crime affecting our properties that was not cleared up. It may have been low-level crime but the police just don't have the resources

Mr Wilson and his wife own hundreds of properties, mainly in Ashford and Maidstone.

He said in difficult economic times the main aim of the police commissioner should be to create a cost-effective police force.

He said: "Basically we are in a position where we have to run a police service when we really don't have enough money to do it.

"Anyone else elected would have exactly the same problem. We have to start making decisions that are more important than just how quickly police answer the phone.

Mr Wilson, who also owns a number of racehorses, said he would have a no-nonsense approach to policing.

"I will ask the people of Kent what they want. If people want their money spent in a certain way that is what we should give them," he said.

The elections for the new commissioner take place on November 15. The role will replace the current Kent Police Authority made up of a panel of councillors and lay people.

Like the police authority, the commissioner will have the power to hire and fire the chief constable, manage budgets, and set police priorities.

Mr Wilson was unconcerned about his own lack of experience in policing and admitted he had only just learnt that Ann Barnes was the current chair of the police authority.

Another hotly tipped candidate is Colonel Tim Collins, who made his name during the war in Iraq. He hopes to be the Tory candidate but angered police unions when he said the job only needed to be part time.

Mr Wilson said he had a number of ideas that would save money when it came to policing, such as using more special constables and cutting back on vehicle costs.

His other ideas for raising money may not be welcomed by Kent drivers. He gave an example of an officer who had been posted near his former home at his request to catch speeding drivers.

He said: "He got £900 worth of fines. They then said they did not have the resources to do it again. That does not seem very business-like to me. Speeding is a revenue earner.'

MONEY SKILLS: Former maths teacher Fergus Wilson made his millions in the property industry

Despite his own brushes with the law (two speeding fines and another for using a mobile phone while driving) the property tycoon said he is pro-police and ready to tackle the challenges.

He said: "A lot of people like my straight talking. I am not someone who believes in a lot of chat. I don't just want to be a police commissioner in name only.

"If I am elected I will be straight round to the nearest police station.'

UTILITIES

Don't bother getting your hosepipe out for spring, it's offically a drought

A HOSEPIPE ban looks increasingly inevitable after Kent was officially declared to be in drought by the Government.

The announcement from Department for Environment Food and Rural Affairs (Defra) comes after a major summit of key players in the water industry and the Environment Secretary, Caroline Spelman.

Kent has joined Northamptonshire and Bedfordshire and counties in the South East on the official drought status list.

Southern Water, which manages Bewl Water near Tunbridge Wells, has applied for a drought order so it can extract more water from the River Medway to fill the reservoir. The lake, which supplies customers locally and in Medway, Thanet and Hastings, is currently at 41 per cent of its capacity.

Water strategy manager Mevrick Gough said: "This will mean water will be conserved in the reservoir to help secure supplies. It is a precautionary measure which we hope will reduce the chances of us having to restrict customers' water use this summer. We have applied for this permit now because taking water in winter is less likely to have any impact on the environment."

The water companies serving Kent have told the Secretary of State that essential supplies will be maintained this summer but it looks inevitable that hosepipe bans will be put in place.

Since October, 2010, the region has received only 80 per cent of its average rainfall, meaning lakes, aguifers and rivers are below normal levels.

Lee Dance, head of water resources at South East Water, which supplies much of mid Kent, said: "We are having to plan prudently for restricting customers' non-essential use of water by banning the use of sprinklers and hosepipes.

"If the situation does not dramatically improve within the next few weeks, we will need to put in place the drought measures set out in our drought plan."

Water companies are already recommending water saving tips to their customers including taking three-minute showers, and saving water that comes out of the hot water tap before it is warm in a bucket and then using it to flush the toilet or in the garden. Thames Water is offering free gadgets such as tap aerators and shower timers, too.

The lack of water is also causing worries for farmers. Less rain will mean lower yields for crops.

NFU southeastern spokeswoman Isobel Bretherton said: "Farmers have already been very aware of water shortages and have been making plans to deal with the situation.

"Water resources are very much linked to the wider issue of food security.

A brand new driveway creates the finishing touch to any property. Planning this now will ensure that everything is completed to perfection, ready to use for the spring. A quality driveway will add value to your property and will transform your home.

Farm owner jailed for playing key role in supply of cocaine

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

A DRUGS gang that used a remote farm in rural Bredgar as a major part of a huge cocaine operation which stretched across the South East have been jailed for a total of 24 years.

A court heard how a clock tower at a farm in Swanton Street, owned by defendant Ty Traton Ripley, was used to store barrels full of chemical cutting agents, used to bulk out cocaine for supply across the region.

But a complex three-year investigation finally saw the operation smashed and those behind it this week faced up to long stretches behind bars.

Maidstone Crown Court heard how the chemicals were used to bulk out smaller quantities of pure drugs once imported into the country.

They were supplied to Ripley by codefendant Omar Sadique. Ripley, who was at the hub of the activity, acted as a regional distributor.

He in turn supplied dealers Raymond Heather and his partner Tracey McCarthy with benzocaine.

The court heard that Sadique's company OA Supplies Ltd was prolific in the distribution of chemical cutting agents on a national scale from premises in Ecclesfield, Sheffield.

Ripley, 40, of Swanton Street, Bredgar, was convicted of assisting in the supply of Class A and B drugs and sentenced to six-and-a-half years' imprisonment. He was also found guilty of possession with intent to supply a Class C drug and sentenced to 12 months to run concurrently.

Sadique, 29, of Rotherham, South Yorkshire, was convicted of assisting in the supply of Class A and B drugs and sentenced to eight years in jail.

Heather, 52, of Lambeth, was convicted of conspiracy to supply cocaine and sentenced to six years' imprisonment and McCarthy, 50, of Rotherhithe, was convicted of conspiracy to supply cocaine and sentenced to three-and-a-half years behind bars.

The four defendants were among nine arrested by detectives as part of the investigation between December, 2009, and November, 2010.

Judge Jeremy Gold QC said, in sentencing: "The proliferation of drugs is a cancer in our society."

Assistant Chief Constable Gary Beautridge, head of the Kent and Essex Serious Crime Directorate said: "This was a particularly complex and time-consuming investigation which led us to many parts of the country in our pursuit of those involved.

"The defendants worked as a highly organised criminal group controlled by Sadique.

"He may have been the one in charge, but each of these defendants had a part to play in the supply of

DRUG DEALER: Ty Traton Ripley, left, stored chemical cutting agents used to bulk out cocaine at the clock tower on his farm in Bredgar. He has now been jailed Class A drugs in this country through their varied, significant and organised roles.

"During our investigations, a clear picture emerged of a chain leading from the supply of cutting agents to the bulking out of high purity drugs and then on to the supply of controlled drugs themselves.

"The Serious Crime Directorate is here to tackle exactly this type of organised, criminal activity and I am satisfied that, having successfully dismantled this supply chain, those responsible are now behind bars for a substantial amount of time."

Five other defendants involved in the trial were found not guilty.

HISTORY

Forgotten WWI tragedy that destroyed lives and reshaped a community

By Ed Hill

ed.hill@archant.co.uk

GALLIPOLI is recognised as one of the biggest disasters for British and Allied troops during World War One, but not many people know of the profound affect it had on the communities of Southborough and Tunbridge Wells.

More than 80 men from the area were killed on a troopship even before they managed to make it to the beaches.

They were members of the 1st/3rd (Kent) Field Company of Royal Engineers who had signed up to help the war effort.

On the night of October 28, 1915, the men were on the small paddle steamer HMS Hythe in the eastern Mediterranean. The 231 men had transferred to the converted cross-Channel ferry ready to land at Helles.

Tragically, just as they were about to land they were hit by another much bigger Navy troopship, the HMS Sarnia.

Judith Johnson is a local historian who has researched the tragedy.

She said: "It was a rough night. They had no navigation lights and could not be seen by the Turks onshore so the other ship didn't see them. HMS Hythe was practically cut in two.

"Those men had only just left England. They were crowded shoulder to shoulder on board and were waiting to be landed.

"The ship went down in 10 minutes."

Some of the men were killed instantly in the collision. Others drowned because they had already got in their vehicles and were unable to escape once the accident occurred.

More than 150 men drowned despite the rescue efforts of the crew from the HMS Sarnia. Nearly all the dead men were from Kent.

One of the tragic deaths was that of Captain David Salomons. The 30-year-old was the only son and heir of Sir David Lionel Salomons one of the country's leading scientists and a pioneer of

The Salomons were a wealthy Jewish family who lived in Southborough. They owned a large estate, now the site of the Salomons Museum, owned by Canterbury Christ Church University.

It had been built by an earlier David Salomons, founder of the Westminster Bank, former Mayor of London and the first Jewish man to speak in the House of Commons.

When the war started the family played a key role in encouraging local men to join the Royal Engineers.

Captain Salomons had studied at Cambridge and travelled widely in Europe and Japan. When the war began he completed his officer training in Chatham.

He drowned trying to save his men, even giving his own lifejacket to a fellow soldier who did Ms Johnson said: "The Salomons were a real forward and innovative presence in the town; when he died the direct line died and his sister gave the house away.

"If he had lived the family may still have been a major force in the town so it did alter the history of Southborough in lots of ways.

A letter has recently been found in Hastings in which Major Alfred Ruston writes to Captain Salomons' family telling them of the bravery their son showed that night. It will soon go on display at the Salomons Museum.

The Southborough war memorial has around 20 names of some of the men who died that night, including Captain Salomons.

Another marble memorial plaque to all the men who died can be found in St Matthew's Church in Broomhill.

Tragically, the day before the men embarked for the Dardanelles the British Government had decided not to send any more men to Gallipoli because the campaign had been such a disaster.

Ms Johnson has researched many of the men found on the war memorial who died that night and others from the regiment who died in the Gallipoli campaign.

She said: "It would have been a massive shock to the community at the time, but now it is almost forgotten. The few survivors that were left did parade in memory to their fallen colleagues up until the 60s, but that ended as they got older.

"It's important that young people in the community remember who these young men were on the Southborough war memorial.

Children lead the way and hope others will pick up on their litter initiative

A GROUP of children picked up nine bags of litter from one Gravesend road, and say other youngsters around Kent should do the same to smarten up their community with just a little effort.

The volunteers tackled Raphael Road as part of a 'big clean up' campaign.

The eight youngsters from a youth club based in Milton Church Hall, spent an afternoon of their half-term working.

My Place Matters is an initiative run in partnership with Gravesham Borough Council, Clean Kent, KCC and Kent Fire and Rescue, with the aim of clearing up and improving the appearance of neighbourhoods and quality of life for local people and encouraging people to take pride in their communities.

Football boss in dark mood as thieves steal floodlight cables

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

THE director of Ebbsfleet United Football Club says that after two thefts she wanted to put up a "closed" sign on the door "and go home"

Jessica McQueen said the burglars stole pitch-length electrical cables, crippling the floodlights and refreshment facilities which will cost around £5,000 to replace. They would only be worth a few hundred pounds to a scrap dealer.

And ground-keeping equipment was also taken in a separate theft.

The cable theft forced the postponment of Wednesday night's reserve game against Chelmsford City, and Southport's visit to Stonebridge Road on Saturday, February 25, has been brought forward an hour to 2pm so it ends in daylight.

Ms McOueen said: "We have been trying to muddle through as best we can. It's all with our insurance people now.

"What really irritates us is that people are buying this cable from these thieves. If they were not buying from them with cash, then they wouldn't

"I know there are legitimate sales going on. But all the time there is cash involved it allows people to be dishonest.

"If it was all done through bona fide company accounts it wouldn't happen.

"You would have to have proper checks and have to know where it's come from and money would be transferred into a bank account once they produced all the paperwork and invoices.

"It would create a paper trail that would be easy to follow. As that doesn't happen, it's like a free for all, and people like us are the victims.

"This must have been a lorry load taken from here, and amazingly no-one heard or saw a thing with a 24-hour garage opposite us and a local company nearby that has 24hour security.

"It's a bit galling really, and we are feeling a bit battered and bruised because we have had two break-ins over eight days and we are starting to get a little fed up.

'You just think to yourself 'let's just put the shut sign outside and go home'. That's how we feel - just a bit defeated which is a shame."

Trying to look on the bright side of getting the floodlights back in action, she said: "But we are up and fighting again now and hopefully we will get everything fixed, including the lights, by our evening game against Wrexham.

"It's a struggle to keep going as it is without this as well."

A series of games and kick-offs have been changed or postponed so the Conference Premier side can complete their matches in daylight while they work on getting the cables replaced.

Club officials hope repair work can be done in time for the club's next Blue Square Premier League home game against Wrexham on Tuesday. March 13, which has to be played in the evening.

Folk guitarist in shock at being named BBC musician of the year

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

TALENTED musician Tim Edey has been recognised for his amazing work by taking folk music's top award.

Composer Tim was born in Broadstairs, and is famed for his mastery of several instruments. He has now been named Musician of the Year at the BBC Radio 2 Folk Awards held at Salford's Media Village.

At the pinnacle of his 15-year career, he said: "I was absolutely honoured and delighted to have been asked to perform and attend. I was utterly shocked to receive the award for Musician of the Year, I'm still very much in shock.

"Also being awarded best duo with Brendan Power was fantastic. It was a real pleasure attending and meeting so many amazing stars of the world folk music scene past and present."

He made his first solo album aged just 17, with legendary Australian-Irish guitarist and producer Steve Cooney.

Firstly a piano and melodeon

HIGH NOTE: Musician Tim Edev

player, Tim was taken to a Begley and Cooney concert by his father, and a week later started learning to play the guitar.

Tim said: "I was obsessed.

"Both Steve Cooney and Seamus Begley have taught me so much about playing music, and I am very grateful to them, along with so many others in the music scene who have had massive influence throughout my life so far."

The 32-year-old said: "Folk music is still a bit fringe in the world of music, but this award will help get our sound out there a little more.

"I lived for a little while in County Kerry, but I have now moved back to my first love, Kent. I have a home with my partner and PR manager Isobel Crowe in Faversham.

"I love playing in Kent – the audiences are so receptive and knowledgeable.

"Medway is a great place and we will be on stage at the Brook theatre soon, plus we are playing at Broadstairs Festival on August 13. There is also a gig at the Tom Thumb Theatre in Margate on March 2.

"Kent is a great place to play and live and we have toured everywhere in the UK, Ireland and Europe. We just love coming back here to relax."

Tim's work includes tracks like Little Bird written for Sharon Shannon, which features regularly on BBC radio shows.

His record company Gnatbite records said: "Tim is very much in demand by the cream of the folk music scene."

REALITY CONTEST

Dominque's curves help her make beauty pageant final

By Chris Murphy

aditorial@kosmadia.co.uk

A SALES advisor working in Debenhams has stars in her eyes as she's made the finals of a beauty pageant for girls who don't resemble a bag of bones.

Dominique Wells, 22, from Biggin Hill, entered the Miss British Beauty Curve contest on a whim as she scanned websites for new work.

She spotted this new contest for girls over size 14, and as a size 16 she was a perfect fit.

Dominique said: "I think we are better role models for young girls. You hear far too much about how great it is to be size eight.

"That is absolutely fine if you happen to be that size naturally, but not so good if you slim down below your natural weight.

"This contest shows you don't need to be a waif to be sexy.

"We are real women entering a real beauty contest showing that you can be lovely if you are size 14 and above.

MAKING A STAND: Dominque

"More and more women are this sort of size so it makes sense to show off what we have and be proud of it.

"I certainly am, and get plenty of admiring glances."

She added: "I graduated last year with a 2:1 in journalism, and I also dance in my spare time, mainly ballroom and Latin-American.

nainly ballroom and Latin-American. "I have been sponsored by a company called DanceSport International who make the outfits for Strictly Come Dancing.

"This is the first year this contest has been run and I really think it deserves to be an annual event to show what real women have got."

It is being organised by Rebecca Phillips, who said: "Here at Miss Cocoa Couture we aim to promote diversity in beauty pageants.

"We hope to encourage young ladies and women of all shapes and sizes and from all walks of life to take part to show the world how amazingly diverse Great Britain really is.

"We believe this pageant will give all women the confidence to pursue their dreams and concur their fears.

The final takes place on this weekend at the Jury's Inn Croydon Hotel in Croydon

EDUCATION

Standard of newest teachers may be hit by funding change

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

UNIVERSITIES offering teacher training could miss out on funding next year after the Government announced plans to switch financial support to school-based training.

In a letter from the Training and Development Agency—the body responsible for teacher training—universities were warned that courses with few numbers of students may lose out on funding in 2013-14.

A number across the country have already been identified as "potentially unviable" and will either have to close or merge with other nearby universities offering initial teacher training (ITT) courses.

The Government is pushing for more school-focused training through 'teaching schools' — a network that trains and supports teachers.

Currently, the most popular path for future teachers is a PGCE – a university-led training programme. But with a reduction in secondary school

FRESH APPROACH: Teachers' training to be done in a new way places and the Department for Education's drive to increase school-led training, universities may have to review involvement on specific courses.

In Kent, Canterbury Christ Church University and the University of Greenwich, which has a campus in Medway, run teacher training programmes, including PGCE.

Canterbury Christ Church, one of the biggest teacher training providers in the country, said it was unsure what would be happening next year.

Dr John Moss, dean of the faculty of education at the university, said: "We remain committed to providing initial teacher training."

He explained that more than 1,000 ITT places had been allocated to the university for 2012-13, for mainstream provision such as PGCE. More than 400 further places have also been allocated for the graduate teaching programme of schoolbased training.

But if specific courses, for example teaching 7-14-year-olds history or a foreign language, have few students, funding may not be made available.

Education experts have raised fears over the changes, warning that, while school-focused training was accepted, funding cuts to traditional courses could jeopardise the high standards of teacher training.

Executive director of the Universities' Council for the Education of Teachers, James Noble-Rogers said: "It is essential that the changes do not inadvertently jeopardise the high quality infrastructure that exists.

"That would do considerable damage to the education of our children and would inevitably lead to teacher supply problems in the future."

Battle declared to save historic war memorials

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

KENT'S historic war memorials could receive special protection through a new campaign which looks to restore crumbling monuments as part of the forthcoming World War One centenary.

Moves to secure protection were sparked by the increasing number falling into disrepair, either by neglect or vandalism.

The campaign, launched by the Heritage Lottery Fund, has brought together heritage organisations to form a War Memorials Action Group to review how to protect and restore monuments in time for the centenary of the outbreak of World War One in 2014.

The group will meet twice a year and review money available from the Lottery and how it could be made easier for communities wanting to restore their local monument.

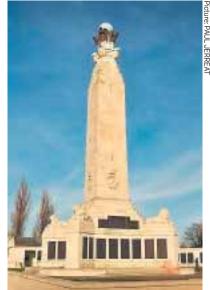

People in Kent are invited to get involved by applying for funding and highlighting memorials that need restoration in time for the centenary.

Over the years, many of the county's memorials have fallen victim to thieves or vandals, most recently in Sidcup where a pair of brass plaques honouring those who died in the two world wars were prised off by thieves and sold to scrap metal dealers.

Chatham's Naval Memorial has to be patrolled due to constant vandalism, and in Ashford the World War One memorial tank was defaced.

Heavy-handed cleaners in Margate damaged a memorial tablet last year by accidentally blasting off the lettering of the names of servicemen.

The Heritage Lottery Fund (HLF) is encouraging groups to come forward with ideas to celebrate the World War One centenary involving the restoration of memorials.

IN MEMORY: The tank at Ashford, and the Kennington Memorial during the refurbishment works

Head of the organisation for the South East Stuart McLeod said: "We would be interested to hear from community groups in Kent who have an idea for a project.

"We are actively seeking and welcoming applications for all kinds of heritage projects large and small that aim to mark the anniversaries of World War One."

A spokeswoman for the organisation said it has been contacting groups in the county to let them know about funding and support available.

"As part of this campaign, HLF has set up a War Memorials Action Group, which is made up of funders, heritage organisations and representatives of the local and voluntary sectors," she said.

"It will be meeting for the first time in March to review the issues facing the protection and restoration of war memorials and to identify what may be needed to ensure they are kept in good condition so that future generations are able to learn about them and the significance they hold within our communities.

Restoration work has recently been carried out in Kennington near Ashford on a memorial to 22 residents who lost their lives in World War Two. It will now include a shelter and new bench in the Garden of Remembrance in Ulley Road.

The original memorial had been neglected for many years and was at risk of collapse.

Chris Morley, chair of the Kennington Community Forum, said he was pleased with the restoration work.

It is hoped other projects such as this will be given the green light as a result of the campaign.

CELEBRITY

Author's plea for you to share your memories of Mr Pastry

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

TO MILLIONS he was the TV funnyman Mr Pastry, but little is known about the later years of one of Britain's biggest stars, who died in Kent.

Now author Michael Chandler is determined to fix that, but needs help from readers who came in to contact with the telly hero.

Mr Pastry was actor Richard Hearne, who died, aged 71, in Bearsted.

Mr Chandler said: "While researching historical plaques in Norwich, I discovered one for Richard outside the Norwich Theatre Royal, and was surprised to find there are no books written about this important comic genius.

"I am now writing a series of biographies of people from that area, and decided Richard should be the first.

"From the late 30s up until the late 50s, Richard was the first person to be labelled a star, working with the likes of Buster Keaton, he was also the BBC's resident clown for 30 years.

"In the 70s Richard was offered the role of Dr Who, but he wanted to play the role as Mr Pastry. The producers refused and gave it to Tom Baker.

"I feel it is important for a new generation to discover his works. He would have been well known in Kent, where he lived from the 40s, so I am hoping readers may either have known him or know others who did.

"I am sure there is a rich history to this almost mysterious star."

Richard Hearne was born in Norfolk in 1908, the son of Richard and Lily May.

Going on to get an OBE, Hearne appeared in several classically English films, including Passport to Pimlico, and Captain Horatio Hornblower. He made his last movie in 1956, the little-known Tons of Trouble with William Hartnell, who later became Dr Who.

Hearne went on to get his own series on the BBC in 1961 which ran for eight 25-minute episodes. Mr Pastry was typically British slapstick with cumbersome items such as skis on trains and a tuba that gets tangled in chairs.

The character was an old man with a walrus moustache, dressed in a black suit or raincoat and trademark bowler hat. Each week the bumbling man would have adventures, partly slapstick, partly comic dance, with two young friends. Jon Pertwee also appeared in a variety of roles – another future Dr Who.

Mr Pastry originated in the 1936 stage show Big Boy, in which Hearne appeared. A Mr Pastry film was subsequently made but portrayed the character as a pathetic figure coming out of prison and totally different from the TV series' bumbling comic.

He was also a regular on the Ed Sullivan Show from 1954. In 1963 Hearne became President of the Lord's Tayerners charity.

He died in Bearsted, in 1979 aged 71, leaving a widow Yvonne and two children. He was buried in a churchyard in St Mary's Platt, near Borough Green.

He had lived at Platt Farm, a 15th century property in Long Mill Lane in the village, from the 1940s and from where he ran a market garden.

Asbestos pay-out hope in face of shock death rates

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

MEDWAY has Britain's second highest rate of asbestos-linked deaths, and the Government stands accused of dragging its feet to help victims while they are still alive.

But a High Court award of more than £50,000 to a former miner could pave the way to better settlements.

A company of compensation specialists used a freedom of information request to the UK's office of statistics, and the results make shocking reading.

Only Barrow has a higher death rate for its population with 8.4 dying per 100,000. While the national average is 2.5 deaths, Medway is almost three times that at 6.5.

Heavy industry and the docks helped contribute to the rise in cases of mesothelioma – a cancer caused by asbestos exposure.

Gravesham's death rate of 4.0 is 23rd, next are Maidstone, Tonbridge and Malling,

SUFFERING: Mesothelioma rates are soaring in Medway

Sevenoaks and Thanet with 3.7; Shepway had 3.2; Dartford, 3.0 and Swale, 2.8. Canterbury is 139th on 2.6; Tunbridge has 2.2; Ashford, 2.0; and Dover is 278th with 1.7.

The figures were obtained by not-for-profit campaign group the Association of Personal Injury Lawyers.

Its president David Bott said: "More people die of mesothelioma in Medway per head of the population than in most other parts of the country.

"What is needed is for the Government to bring forward proposals for a fund which would act as a safety net for injured workers who are otherwise unable to pursue justice."

At the moment, claims are hard to prove and win because the initial cause of the illness could have happened decades ago. A company may have gone out of business, leaving no way of tracking down insurers or documents.

Now, Kent solicitors Furley Page has secured a legal break-through by helping to win £50,000 for Dennis Ball, 92, for his suffering after developing mesothelioma. This could set a precedent.

The recommended payout in the Judicial Studies Board Guidelines is £35,000.

The now defunct British Coal argued because Nottinghamshire miner Mr Ball was so old with a short life expectancy, his damages should be reduced. Mrs Justice Swift rejected this.

A Department of Work and Pensions spokesman said: "The DWP is working to resolve these issues."

£500 fine after 15 year old girl is given a tattoo

A TATTOO artist has been fined £500 plus costs after being found guilty of tattooing a 15-year-old girl. Don Carfoot of Don's Tattooing in Hereson Road, Ramsgate, pleaded not guilty, but was convicted under the Tattooing of Minors Act 1969 at Margate Magistrates Court. Police said this type of prosecution was "very rare" as most parents who find their child tattooed do not wish to pursue the case through the courts.

Super-size ambulance to carry obese patients

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

AS the population gets increasingly obese. Kent ambulance service has been forced to buy an outsized vehicle to cater for its ever-growing patients.

The South East Coast Ambulance Service NHS Foundation Trust said it is taking delivery of three so-called 'bariatric ambulances' and specialist equipment – one will be based at Paddock Wood, and the others in Sussex and Surrey.

The bill for taxpayers is £400,000 for all three.

Bariatrics is the branch of medicine that deals with the causes, prevention, and treatment of obesity.

The vehicles are designed to transport patients weighing up to 50 stone and are based on the current DMA Mercedes model, produced through Irish supplier, Wilker.

Certain modifications have been specially made in this new breed of emergency vehicle, the company said.

Based in Clara, County Offaly, the firm said it had a wider tail lift, central stretcher location, with 360 degree access, central attendant seat for airways management and the ability to store to the side when

BIG DEAL: A bariatric ambulance, designed to carry patients weighing up to 50 stone, is to be based at Paddock transporting patients in their own wheelchair, or the new C Max stair-climber chair.

SECAmb's head of fleet, Justin Wand, added: "The new vehicles and equipment will provide the Trust with a specialist ability to care for these patients who have specific needs."

The design of the vehicle was finalised with contributions from health and safety and the bariatric working group.

Specialist manual handling aids and equipment include a Megasus stretcher, gantry and mobile hoists, threshold ramps and enhanced air cushion lifting equipment in addition to the stair-climber chair.

The Kent vehicle will be based at what is known as a 'make ready centre' and will be used for slimmer patients, too.

Wood

SECAmb operations director James Pavey said: "These vehicles can be used for any patient, from the outside you wouldn't notice them to look much different from the average ambulance."

He said moving a large patient is not usually a dignified procedure and the bariatric ambulances will make things easier.

Mr Pavey added: "We will probably need to increase the size of the fleet to meet the demand, but this is the first step."

PEDAL POWER: Stephen and Shirley Channing's book offers a variety of routes for hikers and cyclists

Journey around Kent – with a Victorian cyclist

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

A NEW work of travel literature called A Victorian Cyclist offers a rare and insightful look into the Kentish countryside in 1886, from the perspective of two wheels.

The third book from Thanetbased historian Stephen Channing and his wife Shirley, A Victorian Cyclist includes several different rambles, each beginning in the seaside town of Margate.

The continuing fascination for the Victorian era and its view of Britain has become even more apparent in recent years with TV series such as Michael Portillo's travelling on the railways using his 19th century Bradshaw's Guide to the landscape, town and villages.

There are also a great number of smaller roads across Kent which wind through countryside largely unchanged from the landscape of the time.

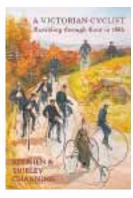

The book takes the reader through nearly 500 miles of Kent countryside, and explores a variety of routes that are ideal for the hiker and cyclist alike.

"From the saddle there is so much to see," said Shirley.

"Kent is a fantastic place and although I've lived here all my life, while researching the book and travelling the routes I went to places I'd never been before.

As well as the beautiful landscapes there is the history and the people we encountered."

Providing detailed historical insight, the narrative offers a comprehensive account of the experiences and discoveries of a Victorian cyclist. This allows the reader to learn more about the landscape and ecology of the Victorian age, and discover how routes and paths have changed and developed over Past heroes, characters, and famous residents from the secluded villages and hamlets of the time are brought to life throughout the multiple journeys.

Additional extracts are drawn from contemporary media, putting the Victorian cyclist's exploits in context and drawing on changing attitudes to give a flavour of the age.

Conventional attitudes to women's position in society, the state of the roads and bike design are all covered, including a section on 'The Art of Velocipede Management'.

More than 200 photos and illustrations (most of which are around a 100-years-old) complete the reader's experience.

Stephen said: "When I discovered the first article written by the Victorian cyclist I was struck by the diverse content and attention to detail.

"After further research, I was astounded to find page after page of rambles covering the Kentish countryside, each as comprehensive as the first.

"I know readers will enjoy reading about the experiences, people, scenery, villages, buildings, flora and fauna which were so enjoyed by our cyclist in 1886. I wanted to offer historians, genealogists, ecologists et al, the opportunity to discover Kent as it was in Victorian days, from the pen of an articulate and knowledgeable member of society.

A Victorian Cyclist comes complete with sections from a contemporary copy of an Ordnance Survey Map for Canterbury and east Kent, showing the road system as it was in our cvclist's time.

Modern directions are provided, alongside illustrations and details about some of the history en route to allow the reader to rediscover these tracks through the eyes of both the modern and the Victorian explorer.

The publisher says the book is one which will interest historians, naturalists and geographers as well as those with a passion for cycling.

An associated website www. victoriancyclist.com is also now up and running.

The book is available from Ozaru Books online and from retailers, including WH Smith and Waterstones.

OPINION

It's criminal to cut Legal Aid

Legal Aid and advice are vital services for those in need, says Andy Ball, of Advice Partnership for East Kent, ahead of cuts to the service

MOST of us think the fire service should be funded, even though our houses are not currently on fire.

Likewise the current NHS reforms are debated by people who are well, but think they might be sick in the future.

But there is another 'emergency service' that is also under threat: advice, much of it provided by the voluntary sector.

The Government's Legal Aid, Sentencing and Punishment of Offenders Bill is currently going through Parliament, and it will drastically reduce the specialist advice available in Kent.

As the Government cuts spending, Legal Aid, specialist legal advice and representation, has come under scrutiny.

It costs a lot -£2 billion a year. But most of that doesn't go to 'fat cat lawyers', despite what some people will tell you.

The average Legal Aid lawyer's salary is £25,000. And the £350 million the Government wants to cut from Legal Aid will disproportionately affect the most vulnerable; the Ministry of Justice says so.

Legal Aid comes in two parts. Criminal Legal Aid provides the solicitors who attend police stations and the barristers who represent people charged with crime.

And it's here where eyewatering amounts of money come into play; 10 top lawyers received more than £500,000 each from Legal Aid in 2010, and some cases cost millions.

But even though criminal cases make up 55 per cent of the Legal Aid budget, they will only suffer 20 per cent of Government cuts.

Contrast this with Civil Legal Aid; advice and representation that deals with more everyday matters such as housing, debt, welfare benefits and family matters.

Apart from family law, much of this is provided by charities: Citizens Advice Bureaux, Shelter, and independent advice agencies. Why? Because it's not profitable for the private sector.

Charities struggle to break even on their Legal Aid work, despite many of the caseworkers being paid less than the average UK salary. More church mouse than fat cat.

But it is this part of Legal Aid that is taking the big hit.

Civil Legal Aid makes up 45 per cent of the Legal Aid budget, but will suffer 80 per cent of the cuts.

And according to recent research, at least 58 per cent of those savings will be lost due to increased costs for other Government departments.

Whole areas of advice will be lost. Welfare benefits, employment, much advice about debt and housing – all will lose Legal Aid funding. An estimated 6,500 specialist legal cases will be axed in Kent.

These are problems that many of us will face in life, often when we least expect it, and caused by things like redundancy, divorce, or illness.

Who will pick up the pieces? The voluntary sector will suffer from the Legal Aid cuts, and is already facing real-term cuts in council funding.

We're all subject to the law, and sometimes we have to deal with legal issues when we're least able to cope.

It's vital we have access to quality advice, and it's often more efficient for the taxpayer. Research from Citizens Advice says that £1 spent on the right advice at the right time can save £8 of Government spending.

Legal Aid is just a means to an end. By all means, reform it or replace it. But good quality advice needs proper funding. If you agree, tell your MP.

KOS COMMENT

Children not cost must be made the priority

LOOKED-after children being dumped in Kent by other councils is an ongoing problem.

But despite pressure by KCC, nothing seems to be done. While there are some cases where children need to be away from their home town, it's doubtful that all 1,340 youngsters in KCC's care had to be moved here.

And it's important to remember the impact this can have on a vulnerable child – taken away from friends, family and familiarity. But it's just as vital to think of the vulnerable children from Kent who could miss out on support due to the increasing strain on services.

Kent may be a quick and cheap option for other councils, but it's the children who could suffer.

Best of British grub

IT'S great to hear a Kent chippy has stolen the nation's heart to best voted the UK's best. And with some of the loveliest beaches on the British coastline in Kent, it's only right we have a fish and chip shop to match. Nothing beats a cod and chips by the sea and now you won't have to go too far to get the best there is.

Lay blame at Carroll's door

THE review of Peter Carroll's book about Gurkhas (February 19) gives an insight into his and Ioanna Lumley's campaign to secure rights for Nepalese soldiers, but fails to reveal the real reason why he found it politically expedient to do so.

In 2000, he became the Lib Dem candidate for the Conservative-held Folkestone and Hythe constituency and in typical opportunistic-style decided to take up Nepalese soldiers resentment that they did not have the same rights of residence and less pension rights than the rest of the British Army, as a means of shaming MP Michael Howard who had hitherto supported the traditional line that Nepalese soldiers must be resettled as Nepali citizens.

In 2004, Labour granted residency rights to the families of all Gurkhas who had served since 1997, but not those with earlier service.

In 2009, by persuading the Government to allow all retired Gurkhas to settle here, the pair's success turned out to be short-lived by virtue of its unintended consequence.

Last month, the Coalition announced that one in eight Gurkhas were to be made redundant. Former defence chief Lord Bramall had warned the Gurkha campaign "could kill the golden goose for later generations" and General Sir Mike Jackson declared the outcome "was the direct result of the campaign spearheaded by Joanna Lumley

With Mr Carroll busy promoting his book, I will not hold my breath in anticipation of him or Ms Lumley offering an apology anytime soon. John Stockham, Folkestone

MPs must act over drought

EMPTY rivers and the prospect of drought and standpipes can all be avoided if our representatives can influence decision-makers to sponsor a national water grid - distributing abundant water in the north, to us here in the south where it is desparately needed.

It could be done utilising much of our existing canal system, to the benefit of all, including fish and wildlife.

Politicians at all levels should recognise the dangers of drought this summer and represent households and farmers by making sure effective plans are in place, with the bonus that a water grid would produce many shovel-ready jobs and protect the Garden of England.

Edward La Coste, Lamberhurst

Send it down from on high

IT WAS interesting to read the headline "Praying for rain as water companies say 'prepare for drought" on the cover of last week's edition because we were doing exactly that at our midweek church meeting in Gillingham.

We asked God to bring the rain because He is able to change the weather. The Bible savs in Deuteronomy Chapter 11, verses 13-17 if we turn to God, He will send the rain in its right season (the water companies have already mentioned the need for the right season).

I would therefore suggest next Sunday we all go to Church and earnestly pray to God that He sends the rain.

Steve Noyce, Gillingham

Jump aboard London trains

I WAS surprised to discover that Dartford's Tory MP Gareth Johnson is so bitterly opposed to plans to include Dartford in some way within London's transport network (February 17).

He should think again... Moves in this direction, of course, aren't new. Before 2010's general election, Dartford's former Labour MP Howard Stoate led a popular campaign to have Transport for London's (TfL) Ovster card scheme extended to Dartford.

And there are big advantages. Being able to swipe an Oyster card at Dartford station - something Dartfordians using nearby Crayford station can already do - will help tackle ticket queues.

Moreover, if Dartford's involvement was negotiated cleverly it could even cut fares good news, potentially, for hard-pressed commuters.

True, this latest proposal looks bigger in scope than Dr Stoate's scheme and accountability is a factor.

TfL answers to London's mayor and Darfordians have no vote in mayoral elections. But negotiating a structure that represents local residents over the fairly narrow matter of train services to and from

Address: Apple Barn, Smeeth, Kent TN25 6SS

London shouldn't be impossible.

Mr Johnson's chief concern that a move by TfL into Dartford will somehow undermine the town's Kentish character - sounds odd.

Does he really believe that Dartford's deeply entrenched Kentish heritage hinges on nothing more substantial than the technicalities of train service management?

Ultimately, this issue must be decided on more rational grounds. And, if there's a proposal that reduces queues, boosts efficiency and even cuts fares - whilst tackling accountability concerns – then it deserves serious consideration.

John Adams, councillor for Stone and former Labour parliamentary candidate for Dartford

Councils are not the ticket

WHAT short-sighted thinking of councils to raise parking fees.

Our high streets are already being starved of trade, mainly because people can park for free in most retail parks.

I remember when you could park in Northdown Road, Margate, for free and for as long as you liked. Parking restrictions were brought in and that was the start of its decline.

Increasing parking fees is no way to attract trade to our rundown towns. Please councils, think again before you add injury to injury. Rex C Priggen,

Westgate-on-Sea

Turning blind eve won't do

NO SURPRISES from Roy Duff. If it's getting colder, it's global warming; if it's getting warmer, it's global warming.

These guys can only handle a win-win, situation (Letters February 19).

No response to the reported weather cycles over hundreds of years. No response to any of the tangible, proveable and indisputable evidence from the past. Just more dodgy data that might suggest whatever these self-appointed 'experts' want it to suggest.

Even if global warming was a future issue, shortages of food, water and other resources, will arrive a lot sooner and be a lot more serious.

Why do these dogmatists turn a blind eye to the truth?

Business Week

online@www.businessforkent.co.uk

Your business is our business

This week we feature two businesses that are unique in their own way thanks to original thinking and an entrepreneurial spirit. Both based in Kent, they stretch their operations to two very different parts of the globe. Catch restaurants in Canterbury and Ashford use their own boat to gather fish in Norwegian waters, where tight regulations protect the environment. And fashion company CHK, based in Ashford, offers jobs, hope and self-respect to Bolivian women who might otherwise be living in poverty. In hard times it can be forgotten that business not only benefits the economy by generating cash – it can also help disadvantaged people and the natural world.

The fishy idea that might catch on

TWO fish-and-chips restaurants in Kent have a very special method of getting their main dishes – their cod and haddock are caught by their own boat.

Granite IV operates out of the Norwegian port of Ålesund and fishes the northern reaches of the North Sea, which rounds the North Cape of the country, and the Barents Sea, which laps the shores of Russia.

'Caught and cooked by us' is the slogan of the firm that runs the Catch restaurants in Ashford and Canterbury.

"I don't know anyone else who operates this way," said Graham Hollinshead, who founded the business. "When I set out, quality was my aim, so, rather than going to a third party for funding and backing, I went to the people who really know what fishing is about — those who do the work."

His company reached agreement with the operators of the 67-metre-long trawler and its captain, Ola Inge Gron-nevet, who recently visited Canterbury and lunched on the fish he had caught.

The Norwegian fishing fleet is subject to rigorous regulations designed to protect stocks, with boats boarded for inspections and helicopters used for surveillance. Nets are checked frequently and quotas sent via satellite link to the authorities.

The measures have seen stocks rise to a level not seen since the 1940s as Norway's Fiske Forever (Fish Forever) campaign seeks to preserve one of the country's most important industries.

The ship spends about four weeks at sea on any one trip and can operate in gale-force winds and 40ft sea swells. The fish are gutted and their heads removed before they are filleted and frozen at a temperature of -30°C.

The catch is then shipped to England, defrosted and served amid colourful surroundings, with posters, newspapers and even a shark as decorations.

Hollinshead said: "We want to make our customers smile, so you will find a little humour here and there in our restaurants. We take our food and what we do seriously, but we try not to take ourselves too seriously.

"Ultimately, nothing beats seeing happy customers once they have tasted and enjoyed our food.

"Our fish is top-quality, as you'd expect from a company with its own boats fishing clear Arctic waters. Fish for the shops is caught and delivered every few days to guarantee freshness.

"It has full Marine Stewardship Council approval, which means our stocks are well managed and sustainable.

"These are two of our most important priorities. We don't grow our own potatoes yet – they're from good farms in the Fens and arrive in their natural state for us to peel and chip at the shop each day. We cook with rapeseed oil as it's one of the healthiest oils to use."

ENVIRONMENTALLY FRIENDLY: Graham Hollinshead runs Catch

Latin style that's knitted to conscience

AN international business showcasing the work of rural Bolivian women and taking it to stylish boutiques across Europe has become a success story for entrepreneur Carolina Reinhardt.

A native of the landlocked country in South America, Reinhardt runs her business from her Ashford home.

Boutiques in Tenterden, Cranbrook and Hawkhurst are the latest to stock her unique designs, handmade from the coat of the alpaca.

The knitwear, which includes jumpers, dresses and shawls, have also proven popular when sold in outlets in Cologne, Bonn and Zurich.

This summer her work will be displayed in London as the fashion industry shows off its new designs.

"I was born in Santa Cruz, Bolivia, but left when I was 17 to study fashion, first in Argentina, before moving to Virginia, USA," she said.

"I then lived in Europe before

CREATIONS: Carolina Reinhardt's business uses alpaca wool from Bolivia to make designer clothing coming to England and establishing my business.'

At her home, Reinhardt, director of CHK Fashion, designs her range, focusing on modern styling, shapes and colours.

Then, once or twice a year, she goes back to her home country and employs women from rural communities to make them.

"In Bolivia it is very common for women to be the victims of domestic violence, or to have their husbands leave them," Reinhardt said.

"These women have no real prospects – so I wanted to change things.

"My aim has been to create sustainable employment, provide fair wages, respect labour laws and provide an adequate return and living conditions for these skilled craftswomen.

"I intend to make a difference by bringing some people out of poverty."

Alpacas – which resemble small llamas – are kept in herds that graze on the level heights of the Andes in the north of Bolivia at an altitude of 3,500-5,000 metres.

Unlike the larger and stronger llamas, they are not bred to be beasts of burden but instead are reared specifically for their wool.

Alpaca fibre is used for making knitted and woven items such blankets, sweaters, hats, gloves, scarves, a wide variety of textiles and ponchos in South America, and sweaters, socks, coats and bedding in other parts of the world

The fibre comes in more than 52 natural colours.

About 250 women work on Reinhardt's project, some crocheting, some knitting and some using hand-looms.

Reinhardt said: "I am trying to give people a measure of self-respect as well as employment.

"Some of these women may not be able to read or write, but they are incredibly talented with their hands.

"I want to prove to the world that there is a lot of potential in Bolivia."

AWARDS

Recognition is a great deal

CASTLE Corporate Finance has walked away with a hat-trick of awards at Insider's South East Dealmakers Awards 2012.

It was the culmination of an eventful day for Castle, with the team closing a significant business sale earlier that same day.

The Tonbridge firm says staff thoroughly enjoyed their evening at Copthorne Effingham Park near Gatwick, with director Mike Norrie winning the Corporate Finance Adviser Of The Year title and the principal award, Dealmaker Of The Year, presented by Gyles Brandreth.

Norrie, who launched Castle Corporate Finance with Colin Harvey in 2008, was praised at the ceremony as a "real mainstay of the market".

"We were extremely proud to win these high-profile awards," he said. "Last year was busy for us and this one has started well. We work very closely with business-owners, guiding them through what is always an emotional process, helping them to achieve the best outcome for them and their company."

The team was also named lead adviser on the Deal Of The Year, the £18 million sale of Sidcup energy procurement and carbon strategy consultancy Power Efficiency to Balfour Beatty.

"I am proud Power Efficiency is a Castle Corporate Finance deal," said Norrie. "The shareholders are great and thoroughly deserve the award."

Search engine optimisation in a nutshell

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

IF YOU are a business-owner or handle your company's marketing, you are likely to have heard about and deleted numerous emails pertaining to search engine optimisation (SEO).

These are likely to have been from agencies informing you of how they have 'visited your website and noticed that you are not listed in the major search engines and directories', before offering you 'guaranteed top positions', along with a '500 per cent increase in traffic'.

These emails are often a pest to business-owners, but they're also a hindrance to those in the industry. They give SEO-providers a bad reputation and, rather than demystifying the process or demonstrating its importance, serve only to create hostility and apathy toward search engine optimisation.

In recent years SEO has been referred to most commonly as 'a dark art'. This does not accurately describe the process. It can be argued, though, that it is an art: the basic principles are straightforward, but it takes skill and practice to achieve great results.

Search engine optimisation is the process of increasing traffic and enquiries through a website by enhancing your search results in search engines. Search results matter; when your pages have higher rankings, more people can find you.

The use of search engines such as Google is the second most popular online activity (behind only Facebook) and, with the number of internet-users in the UK at more than 51 million, getting your website found is important.

SEO improves the odds of someone finding your company online.

Search engines account for every word on the internet. When someone searches in Google, it narrows results to pages that are only about those words searched for.

So how does SEO get your site to appear high up among those results?

The first step is to know your customers. More specifically, know your potential customers, who they are, what they are looking for and which phrases they could be typing in to Google to find you. With this knowledge, you can identify around which key phrases your website will need to be optimised.

It is important to find the right key phrases – those that will not only spotlight your site in Google searches but that will also drive visitors.

For example, it is all well and good to rank for 'dog grooming in Folkestone', but if nobody is searching for that phrase it's not going to be sending any visitors or shaggy-haired dog-owners your way.

Once you have selected the phrases

RELAX: Search engine optimisation isn't as difficult as you might have thought that will drive traffic and enquiries to your website, on-page optimisation is the next stage of the SEO process, ensuring your site contains these phrases in all the right ways and places.

This means that the phrases are contained in the right amounts – not too much or too little.

You need to implement your phrases in the page copy, check the titles of the pages are appropriate and that you're making full use of images and videos.

In addition, your navigation needs to be easy for both search engines and users to follow and – most importantly – make sure that your site's page code shows all of this.

Once your website itself is optimised, SEO looks at who is linking to your site.

Links to your website matter. More precisely, links from quality, relevant websites to yours matter. It is a recommendation and also a way of pointing out to users and search engines that your site has good information related to your carefully-selected key phrases. Search engines can detect how many links a site has and tell which of these are relevant. It will give more weight to those from trustworthy and related Effective SEOs will ensure your site gains links from trustworthy, relevant sites and that those links will be based on your keyphrases rather than your company name.

SEO is fundamental to a successful online marketing campaign.

Accordingly, to really see lasting results from SEO it is important to turn to the experts – not those companies that plague your inbox with extravagant claims but one that fully understands SEO and takes the time to get to know both your business and its customers competition for most vacancies and that people looking for work need all the help they can get, which is why we're offering our customers this free service.

"Residents have been overwhelmingly receptive to the campaign so far.

"We're encouraging customers to come in store and take advantage of this free service. Simply bring your CV to any of the stores and we will happily print it for free."

John Richardson, UK chairman for Cartridge World, said: "Unemployment is a crucial problem facing our economy today and printing CVs is one small way we can use our resources to help those who need it.

"A good CV can make you stand out from the crowd and ensure your job application moves to the top of the pile."

Take on an apprentice... it matters

THANET COLLEGE has thrown down the gauntlet, inviting all businesses in the area to take on an apprentice this year.

During National Apprenticeship Week, Thanet College laid down the challenge in an attempt to tackle the continued rise in unemployment, which has led to Thanet having the highest rate of youth unemployment in the South East.

The numbers of young people who are now unemployed have reached the million mark nationally – the highest rate in 20 years – and there is no sign that things are about to get better.

One way in which local businesses can take on a young person is through an apprenticeship. This is where the employer gains someone bespoke to their needs and in a cost-effective way (limited to a commitment of one year in many cases) and the employee gains on-the-job training, vital job-specific skills and qualifications that are crucial to career progression.

Apprenticeships can bring increased productivity and develop a workforce needed both now and into the future, bringing fresh talent and new thinking and filling skill gaps. Thanet College's business division, Training Solutions, offers assistance in achieving this.

David Foley, chief executive of Thanet and East Kent Chamber of Commerce, says that Training Solutions is making taking on an apprentice easier than ever. He said: "Nine out of 10 companies in Thanet have fewer than 20 workers.

"In the past, these firms may have dismissed the opportunity to take on an apprentice as being too cumbersome, timeconsuming or simply too much like hard work.

"With the procedures being outlined by organisations such as Training Solutions, the administrative burden is significantly reduced so that even quite small enterprises can see an immediate benefit.

"We urge all companies in Thanet to consider the new apprenticeship schemes and so discover how their operations, margins and future prospects can be improved with the addition of an on-site apprentice."

Kirsty Bryant, Head of Training Solutions, is passionate about her organisation's ability to help improve things for Thanet and east Kent.

She said: "There is a growing consensus that without further action we risk creating a 'lost generation' of young people in this country.

"Obviously the situation is multiplied in this region due to higher rates of youth unemployment than average.

"These people will be shut out of the labour market and increasingly disconnected from the world of work or learning – this will, over time, have an impact on local skills levels, which in turn will have a knock-on effect on the success of existing business as well as our ability to attract new employers to the area.

"Should this situation occur, it would limit employment opportunities more generally and ultimately reduce people's quality of life and environment, which has far-reaching and long-lasting implications and will impact on every man, women and child living in this area – it's as serious as that.

"I urge all businesses in Thanet, big and small, to give Training Solutions a call.

"Even if you don't think an apprentice is for you, or you don't think you can afford one at the moment, there are so many Government grants and incentives available at present and I am confident we can help business and thus subsequently help support our local economy."

Company trains future managers

MOVE management firm Sargents has launched an apprentices programme developed with employability and skills provider Skills Training

The company, based on the Fordgate Business Park in Thamesmead, and owned by Restore plc, provides move management and storage services in London and the South East.

Managing director Mark Rousell said: "At Sargents, we are always striving to do better and so the continuous professional development of our staff is a major priority.

"I am delighted that we have developed our apprenticeships programme which will help us ensure all our staff have the skills and the discipline we need to provide our customers with truly excellent service.'

The team-leading apprenticeship programme will help ensure a pipeline of employees who have developed the specific skills required for supervisory roles in the business. The apprenticeship includes areas like time management; communication; handling paperwork and problem solving.

Currently nine staff members are working towards National Vocational Qualifications at Level 2 in Team Leading, with a further 12 staff enrolling on the programme throughout February.

Success comes to those who wait, proves Amy

SHE started her working life waiting tables but after completing an apprenticeship she knew the right career was waiting for her.

Amy Nichols, 19, studied public services at college and worked as a waitress during evenings and weekends.

When her course finished, she had a decision to make. She found out about KEY Training Services and took up an apprenticeship within Kent County Council's special educational needs team.

Amy said: "Once college had finished. I continued to work as a waitress part time for a couple of months. I didn't feel that working in a restaurant was something I wanted to do as a career. "I wanted to have a full-time personal development or run job but at apprenticeship schemes? If you the same have a good news story email time knew editorial@kosmedia.co.uk needed to improve my skills and qualifications if I wanted to work in an office. Employers tend to want you to have experience as well as skills, so an apprenticeship is good for that because it gives you that experience and gets a foot in

"Following my apprenticeship, I was given the opportunity to take up a secondment for a team that I helped out during my time as an apprentice.

"I've managed to successfully secure a permanent job in KCC and am continuing to learn and enhance my skills.

"If it wasn't for the apprenticeship scheme, I might still be waitressing and on the same wage. I would like to work my way up at KCC and possibly consider undertaking further alongside of my work.

Amy was one of several young people who collected certificates during National Apprenticeship Week to mark the end of their training.

Five Kent companies that offer apprenticeships - Bedfont Scientific, Kent Gateway Block Management, Kent Police Authority, Lewis Waterman, and Woodlands Day Centre - were also thanked for giving schoolleavers opportunities to start out on the career ladder.

KCC deputy cabinet member for education, learning and skills, Cllr Gary Cooke, said: "I am grateful to all the employers that are offering ap-

Rotary members help get students ready to join the world of working THANET Rotarians are helping Marlowe Academy students to hone their job interview skills and to perfect their CVs.

Members of the Rotary Club of Thanet used to run mock interviews but have now turned their attention to a more targeted mentoring scheme which helps to boost the students' confidence.

Some 20 students have benefited from the scheme so far, including work experience placements and advice.

One student interested in politics was given guidance by a Rotarian and Kent county councillor. Another student who wished to join the police has had meetings with serving police officers.

The new-style mentoring scheme was introduced by Thanet Rotarian, Michael "I have Studham. He said: done this mentoring within the Association of Chartered Certified Accountants and it struck me that it would be better to have something on-going and less stressful for students than mock interviews.

Recently, The Academy thanked the Rotary Club by giving members a dinner in their honour and staging a production showcasing the work of all ages of the Academy's performing art students in drama, music and dance.

The Rotarians insisted on paying for their meal and the money was donated to on-site radio station, Academy FM.

Industry gives backing for UCA Creative Challenge programme

THE University for the Creative Arts has gathered together an array of creative industry leaders and experts to find the most innovative student in the South East as part of the Creative Challenge programme.

Uwe Derksen, Director of Research + Enterprise at UCA, said: "The Creative Challenge is our annual industry-led programme that helps our most talented students develop their creative business and innovation skills; applied in the context of real world complex demands.

"The Creative Challenge culminates in a competition to find the most enterprising and innovative students at the university. Expert business people will nurture students with brilliant ideas through a development programme. The programme is designed to identify 10 finalists in May.'

The competition is open to all students at the University for the Creative Arts. The top 50 finalists have just been announced and are from all five campuses across UCA. Ideas are top secret and range in theme and discipline. All 50 students will now benefit from this exciting industry-led programme.

DESIGNER: Kane O'Flaherty gets his award

Last year's winner Kane O'Flaherty said: "The Creative Challenge pushed my creative flair, enhanced my technical skills and increased my self-confidence... I found myself as a designer.

Past supporters have included industry leaders Karen Millen, Wayne Hemmingway, Sony and Kia UK, and this year the competition is being supported by more than 30 businesses including Virgin Media, Sony Computer Entertainment, and Kanoti.

Also new this year is the support of Creative Barcode, which has provided each of the top 50. students with an account so all their work and ideas over the coming year will be protected.

Science project takes four pupils all the way to the big bang finals

CHAUCER Technology School pupils are top of the class after winning a place in the finals of the 2012 National Science and Engineering Competition.

Philip Clark, Libbie Norton, Chantelle Martin and Daniel Keen impressed judges by setting themselves the task of reducing the school carbon dioxide output by 10 per cent.

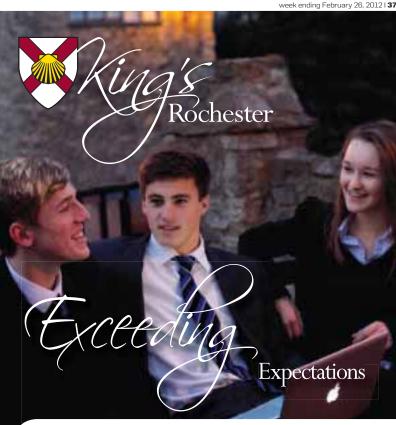

They will now go head to head with students from across the country in an attempt to claim one of the UK's most prestigious science and engineering honours for young people.

Philip, Libbie, Chantelle and Daniel's shortlisted entry will be presented to more than 30,000 people at The Big Bang UK Young Scientists and Engineers Fair, the country's single biggest celebration of science and engineering for young people, held at the NEC, Birmingham from March 15-17.

The world-class judging panel includes renowned space scientist Dr Maggie Aderin-Pocock, Nobel Prize winning biochemist Sir Tim Hunt, and the Science Museum's inventor in residence Mark Champkins, among others.

The pupils said: "We so proud that our project has made it into the finals of the National Science and Engineering Competition. It really encouraged us to think about science and engineering in a new light and helped us to realise what fun wecould have.

EMPL OYMENT

Clegg pledges millions to help 'neets'

DEPUTY Prime Minister Nick Clegg has promised to deal with the "ticking timebomb" of teenagers who are not in work, school or training with a massive cash injection.

On Tuesday he announced a $\pounds 126$ million scheme to get 16- and 17-year-olds back into employment or education.

The initiative is part of the Government's Youth Contract scheme announced last November, which is aimed at tackling unemployment among young people.

But business representatives say that for the scheme to work commitment and the right attitude need to be shown by the young people taking part – otherwise their worth to companies is negligable,

Under the scheme, charities and businesses will be invited to bid for contracts worth up to £2,200 to take on teenagers and will receive an initial payment up front, followed by more money when the youngsters show progress. At least 55,000 so-called 'neets' – not in education, employment or training – who have no GCSEs at grade C or above are expected to benefit.

Mr Clegg said: "Sitting at home with nothing to do when you're so young can knock the stuffing out of you for years. It is a tragedy for the young people involved – a ticking timebomb for the economy and our society as a whole.

"This problem isn't new, but in the current economic climate we urgently need to step up efforts to ensure some of our most troubled teenagers have the skills, confidence and opportunities to succeed."

The news has been welcomed by Kent's business community, but the Federation of Small Businesses emphasised that the young people themselves had to demonstrate the right attitude when it came to the workplace.

Roger House, FSB chairman for Kent and Medway, said: "Employers need enthusiastic young people, ready to work. The right attitude and work ethic are essential and under the Youth Contract young people will be able to demonstrate their value in the workplace and to the business.

"Schools provide students with knowledge and skills. However, businesses rank attitude as very important: interpersonal communication, team-working, punctuality and selfdiscipline. Sadly, these qualities are absent in some youngsters."

"To assist schools to better prepare their students for employment the FSB

INVESTMENT: The scheme aims to get more of our young people working in Kent is backing Young Enterprise, encouraging participation in its Company Programme, which will provide insight into the world of business, commerce and entrepreneurship."

This age group has been singled out because evidence suggests that unemployment early on in a person's working life can have a permanent effect on earning potential.

Statistically, at age 42, someone who has been frequently unemployed as a teenager is likely to earn up to 15 per cent less than his of her peers, the Department for Education said.

The announcement comes after the latest unemployment figures showed that the numbers of 16- to 24-year-olds not in work increased by 22,000 to 1.04 million in the three months to December. Figures for the third quarter of last year, showed that more than a million 16- to 24-year-olds, or 1,163,000 – almost one in five, were considered to be neets.

Mr Clegg said: "Many of them will have complex problems... truancy, teenage pregnancy, a lack of GCSEs and health problems.

"Helping them on their feet will not be without challenges and Government cannot do this alone. But we all have a duty to reach out to the young people who can be hardest to reach.

"That's why today I am calling on charities and other organisations at the coalface to work with Government to help tens and thousands of lost teenagers on to a brighter path."

The scheme will give businesses complete freedom in how they provide their support.

Tim Loughton, Children and Young People's Minister, said: "Providers know how best to support young people back into education training and employment. We are looking forward to receiving some innovative ideas that really work from experienced organisations in all sectors."

THE KENT COUNTY COUNCIL (TOVIL ROAD, MAIDSTONE) (PUFFIN CROSSING)

ROAD TRAFFIC REGULATION ACT 1984

NOTICE is hereby given that the Kent County Council, in exercise of its powers under Section 23 of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 and all other enabling powers, intends to convert the existing Zebra Crossing to a Puffin Crossing on Tovil Road, Maidstone, Kent, which is located approximately 33 metres south west of the mid point of its junction with Eccleston Road and Courtenay Road.

The purpose of the scheme is to provide a safe place for pedestrians to cross as there are concerns over pedestrian safety within the area. The existing Zebra Crossing is used by an increased number of school children and shoppers using nearby facilities and a high population from the surrounding residential housing estates.

The features of a Puffin Crossing include facilities to cancel pedestrian demands when they cross in the gaps in traffic and to allow for varying clearance times after the pedestrian green signal, to allow for slow pedestrians without harassment from drivers. The pedestrians in the area would therefore benefit from the introduction of a Puffin Crossing to assist with the high pedestrian movement throughout the area.

Jacobs Engineering UK LTD. has been commissioned by the Council to publish the Notice of intent at the same time as providing notification to all interested parties and complies with the requirements of Section 23(2) of the Road Traffic Regulation Act, 1984.

Copies of the plan showing this proposal an explanatory statement and a map showing the extents of the scheme may be inspected during normal office hours at The Kent County Council Offices, Sessions House, County Road, Maidstone, Kent, ME14 1XX, and at Maidstone Borough Council Offices, Maidstone House, King Street, Maidstone, Kent, ME15 6HQ.

THE KENT COUNTY COUNCIL (VARIOUS ROADS, THANET) (SPEED LIMITS) ORDER 2012

ROAD TRAFFIC REGULATION ACT 1984

NOTICE is hereby given that the Kent County Council, in exercise of its powers proposes to make an Order under Sections 1(1), 2(1) and 2(2), Sections 81 to 84 of and part IV of Schedule 9 of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 as amended, the effect of which will introduce reduced speed limits to be enforced on the lengths of roads approaching and including the roundabout junctions and link road between them in the area commonly known as "Lord of the Manor".

Following on from the consultation carried out in January 2012 the Kent County Council has amended the proposals at the "Lord of the Manor" roundabout area from a proposed 30 mph speed limit to a proposed 40 mph speed limit.

As part of Kent County Council's regeneration programme, Phase 1 of East Kent Access was constructed and opened several years ago and Phase 2 included the construction of the A299 Hengist Way, from "Minster roundabout", eastwards to "Cliffsend roundabout", southwards to "Sevenscore roundabout" and eastwards to "Lot of the Manor junction"; and the A256 Richborough Way from "Sevenscore roundabout", southwards to "Ebbsfleet roundabout" and A256 Ramsgate Road, from "Ebbsfleet roundabout," southwards to "Richborough roundabout".

This section of works will reduce the speed limit on the approaches to the "Lord of the Manor" roundabouts, the circulatory carriageways and the link road between them. to ΔO mph.

The length of the existing 40 mph speed limit on the A299 Canterbury Road East will be extended in a westerly direction from its current boundary adjacent to its junction with Windermere Avenue, to its southern roundabout junction with "Lord of the Manor"; and the length of the existing 40 mph speed limit on Sandwich Road will be extended in a north easterly direction from a point 29 metres north east of the mid point of its junction with Cliffs End Road to the southern roundabout at the junction commonly known as "Lord of the Manor"

Jacobs Engineering UK Ltd has been commissioned to work in partnership with the Kent County Council to progress the legal procedures necessary to implement the proposed measures.

A copy of the scheme proposal, an explanatory statement and a plan showing the extents of the scheme can be inspected during normal office hours at the Kent County Council Offices, Sessions House, County Road, Maidstone, Kent, ME14 1XQ, Thanet District Council Offices, PO Box 9, Cecil Street, Margate, Kent, CT9 1XZ, and affected Parish and Town Councils which are: Cliffsend PC, Manston PC and Ramsgate TC.

Anyone wishing to support these proposals, or object to them, should write to Diane Bourne, Jacobs Engineering UK Ltd, Miller House, Lower Stone Street, Maidstone, Kent, ME15 6GB, quoting the name of the Order and reference No "B1425100" and stating their reasons, by no later than Monday 19th March 2012.

THE INTERVIEW

Reginald D Hunter

An American comic in England? Now that was never in the plan

Joe Bill discovers an already popular stand-up feels he has yet to really hit his peak

HE deep, southern American accent of Reginald D Hunter is unmistakable. Taking time out from his busy schedule, sitting in a waiting room at BBC's Western House in London, the most soughtafter comedian of the moment chatted tiredly to vet another journalist.

He said: "My, my, my, where are you now? Kent? There are some dangerous letter-writers in Kent. The BBC is terrified of letter-writers from Kent. I don't know why.'

The 42-year-old is touring with his new show, Sometimes Even The Devil Tells The Truth, as well as appearing on TV to promote it and continuing his regular commitments to comedy panel shows.

He explained what his new tour was about: "There is a similar set of topics for this tour: destruction, terror, mayhem, but with a humorous and emotional twist, basically

"None of it is controversial to me, but then I am not white middle class, so we won't know until I say it," he said.

The story of how he got into comedy is well known, but Hunter tells it anyway just for interview protocol.

He said: "I wanted to see something different, feel something different, think something different, and I knew that wasn't very likely if I stayed over in Georgia. England was as far as my money and wits could take me.

"I actually came here to study acting. I was only supposed to be here a few months and then go back and start acting in New York or LA or whatever place would hire me, but what is that thing that Christians say? Your plan is what God likes to listen to when he wants a laugh.'

The Georgian, known for his political satire, quick wit and laid-back, deadpan style, explained that comedy was, like many others, something he stumbled upon.

He said: "The acting stuff worked out OK, but it was just a short course. I didn't have the money for anything more. It ran its course and I ran its course. I came out of it and said 'Oh crap!' because I didn't know what to do.

However, comedy couldn't have been further from his mind while growing up in the deep

"I only started fiddling around with acting in my late teens, late in college," he said. "When I was a kid I had fantasies of becoming the president or a senator or an astronaut, all things little American boys dream about. When I was 14 I wanted to play baseball; at 16 I wanted to be a professional chess-player; and when I was seven I wanted to be a pimp for a

But despite his success both in the UK and back across the pond, Hunter has no plans of getting "too

But the six-foot-plus comedian does believe there is still more to come from his locker of

He said: "I believe I am yet to peak, but I don't know how true that is because everyone is delusional and thinks that.

"I feel as though I am entering the second act of my play of whatever my life is.

We will figure out what act two is. I hope I either keep peaking and act two will be great and act three will be even better, or I die real quickly and go straight to legend status.

"That way is almost preferable as you get to do a lot less work."

Hunter has John Gordello opening the show for him, a man whom the stand-up says was an inspiration to him and a former flatmate.

"He is one of my mentors. The lessons that John has taught me resound in my ears.

"The first big gig I did after the first Perrier nomination was at His Majesty's Theatre [in Aberdeen]. I'd never seen three tiers of people looking at me before - it was a little like a deer caught in the headlights.

"He taught me that if you want to be a standup, then you cannot be beaten by a building, you cannot let the prestige or reputation or the lavishness of a place intimidate you. As a stand-up you're supposed to have an inherent disrespect for every building you're in.'

Hunter remains constantly on our TVs, appearing on 8 Out Of 10 Cats and Mock The Week, but he has a place in his heart for one particular show.

"The best panel show is Have I Got News For You," he said. "They have been doing it a long time. They are like an old leather coat you have that just knows your shape and your grooves.

"They don't have the same level of tension that others have. There is a difference in working with old pros to working with people trying to establish something.

"Other shows often have panic about them and they make you show up at two, whereas the old pros just say 'Just show up at five, make something up, you'll be all right.'

Clearly, given the success enjoyed by Reginald D Hunter, there's something to be said for that.

New Mint Leaf Indian offers quality cuisine

THE newly-opened classic indian restaurant, the Mint Leaf Lounge, is ready for business. Both clean and modern inside, the restaurant is dedicated to serving freshly-cooked traditional Indian cuisine.

Fresh ingredients and aromatic flavours will tempt any spice fan to one of the team's special banqueting nights, which run every Tuesday for just £10.95.

The group's motto is Simply Scrumptious And Irresistible and it believes that every Indian enthusiast should try out some of the Mint Leaf Lounge's speciality dishes. These include the Bengali-style gosht kodu, murgh makhani chicken, the batok salon roasted duck and the spicy naga lamb.

There are still some of the very popular dishes such as passandas, kormas and baltis, so there is something to satisfy everyone.

With the order service available online, the Mint Leaf Lounge is ready for takeaway orders offering a free bottle of Indian beer as part of the service. It also offers a delivery service to customers inside a four-mile radius.

Children under five eat for free and there is free parking at the front of the restaurant.

ALL ARE WELCOME: The See Ho can cater for both small or large groups

Walkers love the taste of the countryside at The See Ho

THE See Ho is a busy, friendly country pub that serves great beers and a vast range of home-prepared dishes

Early-bird specials, dinners, Sunday roasts and fresh fish are all features that attract customers to the varied menu, which uses as much local produce as possible.

The eatery lies just off the M2 so is perfect for a quick drink or even a relaxing dinner after a hard day's shopping at Bluewater.

It is also near a lovely stretch of countryside and is very popular with walkers and ramblers. Both small or large groups of up to 30 can be catered for after a stroll or hike through the excellent local landscape.

Current top-sellers on the menu are the delicious home-made rabbit pie and the steak-in-ale pie. All dishes on the menu are home-made and the See Ho offers a two-mealsfor-£10 special.

Other treats on the menu include meatloaf mash with fresh vege-tables, or perhaps fishcakes, chips and peas, and there are various pasties with chips and peas or

All of the dishes are complemented by excellent beers and wines, which the knowledgeable staff ensure are kept perfectly.

Fresh food at very reasonable prices is the key to the success of the venue, which is now taking bookings for Easter week, when there will be special guests taking up the microphone and performing live in-house.

The See Ho is open from 11am until 3pm at lunchtime and 6pm until 11pm each evening, seven days a week. Well worth the walk!

Savour a blooming excellent meal

BLOOMERS Restaurant at the Overcliffe Hotel is a rare gem that should not be missed. Established in 1980, it is one of the best-kept secrets in Kent, offering excellent food and an ambience second to none.

The bar, restaurant and conservatory are all candlelit at night, giving the place a dreamlike quality - ideal for that very special meal with the most important person in your life.

Most Saturdays the resident pianist will serenade diners on the grand piano, performing an excellent selection of music to suit every mood.

This relaxing experience can be added to as diners sit back with a perfectly-chilled glass of champagne or an expertly-mixed cocktail in the bright conservatory.

You can also choose from the first-class menu and extensive wine list.

Drinks can be served alfresco in the garden as spring and summer roll up.

In previous years those who have enjoyed the atmosphere include former Prime Minister Tony Blair, comedians such as Bernard Manning and Freddie Starr and entertainers Gerry and the Pacemakers, Rick Wakeman and Max Boyce. There is even a celebrity corner, where guests and diners can check out who has gone before them. The restaurant has appeared on BBC television.

It is open to non-residents for dinner each evening, but to make the experience complete why not book a room and stay over?

The hotel is ideally situated for the town centre, the local railway station and Ebbsfleet International station.

Why you should plough a joyful furrow towards this rural gem

DARK and winding road through woods and across fields was the perfect prologue to a meal on the green.

Stalisfield Green, to be precise, home to The Plough, a traditional country pub built almost 600 years ago that sits proudly in the middle of nowhere. But what a

A roaring fire, beams and tight bar set the tone for what was to be a cosy and delicious meal for two. Seated in old armchairs, we were greeted warmly and given a choice of drinks, almost all originating from the surrounding area, and all definitely brewed in Kent.

We were handed our printed menus featuring meals and ingredients sourced from Kentish farmers, fishermen and brewers.

Each dish had a name and the location from where it was sourced. And on consultation with our attendant we were assured of the quality ingredients available, with the old 'We know the farmer personally' line.

As The Plough representative had promised, we were not disappointed. To start, I opted for mussels steamed in Biddenden cider (£7.95). Without beating about the bush, they were the best mussels I have ever eaten. They were juicy, oozing flavour and cooked to perfection, with none of the usual garlic war. Questioning the waiter on where they were from, I was told that usually the mussels used are from Hythe Bay, but because of the time of year these were from Shetland, where the colder water was more beneficial to growth. That will do for me.

My guest opted for the curried parsnip soup with sesame straws (£6.50) - the thumbs-up came as the creamy soup was polished off without a hint of fatigue.

For mains I was swayed from the Romney mutton pie by the Farmer Palmer's 28-day Angus steak with chips, mushroom, slowroasted tomato and chop house sauce. I chose the rump rather than the sirloin at £16.95.

Medium rare I ordered, medium rare it arrived, an overlooked skill. The steak arrived separate to the home-cooked, crispy chips, promoting its magnitude.

It was everything a steak should be, juicy but not fatty... excellently done. I almost wish I had gone for the sirloin because I can't imagine how the higher grade tasted.

My guest went for the Monkshill Farm Kentish ranger chicken with smoked bacon (£15.25). A quick taste confirmed the presentation wasn't just a façade - succulent with no hint of dryness.

The Plough's home-made ice-cream (£4) we chose the praline and chocolate-brownie flavours - was a perfectly light end to the meal.

Many businesses want to buy into the idea of locally-sourced food, but here it was done properly for just £59.75 for two. They say that if you have a good meal you will tell five people... a bad one, you will tell 15. After this joyous experience, those figures should change

Was this the first real detective story?

The Woman In White

Trinity Theatre. Tunbridge Wells

Tuesday, February 28-Saturday, March 3 01892 678678

OFTEN considered to be the first real detective story, this new adaptation of Wilkie Collins's 19th-century novel The Woman In White heads to the Trinity Theatre this week.

The story revolves around Sir Percival Glyde, who is hounded for money by his old friend, the sinister Count Fosco, so his marriage to the heiress Laura Fairlie is for one reason only... her fortune.

As events unfold, Glyde's behaviour becomes more desperate as he attempts to secure Laura's money. The show is an intriguing mix of disturbing greed, romance and mystery. Trinity will be running evening and matinee showings of this entertaining and gripping production.

Tickets cost £12.50 each night, with the matinee performance at £7.50. Phone the box office on 01892 678678 or visit www.trinitytheatre.net.

Let the trains take the main stage Steam festival

The Historic Dockvard, Chatham

Sunday and Monday, April 8-9 01634 823800 www.thedockyard.co.uk

FANS of old-time transport will get the chance to let off steam at The Historic Dockyard, Chatham, over Easter. Now in its 10th year, organisers are focusing this year's Medway Festival Of Steam And Transport on trains. Joining the specialist vehicles will be a new Steampunk village, a folk and blues music stage and an Airfix 'make-and-take' section.

The dockvard's own locomotive Aiax will be on show, along with the 1895 Aveling & Porter Sydenham and 1936 Peckett. There is also the quest engine Victory, an ex-dockyard locomotive returning to Chatham on one of its first outings following restoration.

The Great British Home Show

The one-stop-shop for everything you want your home to be

By Gary Wright

THE Great British Home Show 2012 will be held in Kent's new £60 million events venue, Glow, Bluewater, over the bank holiday and Diamond Jubilee weekend from Thursday, May 31, to Monday, June 4.

The show's theme 'Reveal Your Hidden Home' recognises people are choosing to stay where they already live and improve their surroundings rather than uproot to a new home, and will showcase thousands of inspirational ideas and products from the best that Britain has to offer.

Alongside hundreds of Great British Home Show exhibitors, there will be a spectacular Diamond Jubilee street party across one level of the Glow complex, complete with a village green, central bandstand, sports village and traditional market stalls, all surrounded by some amazing gardens designed especially for the show.

The street party will give visitors the chance to step back in time and peek inside a typical house from 1952 to see how life in the great British home has changed since the Queen ascended to the throne.

"This is a unique exhibition which will bring a new experience for visitors offering a great day out with the chance to see and buy all the latest in contemporary design for the home and garden," said Nick James, event director for All About Brands, the company behind the show.

Exhibitors are being chosen to ensure visitors can discover the widest possible range of contemporary and traditional home design from furnishings, kitchens and bathrooms to the way to integrate the latest technology in your home.

There will be demonstrations and advice from celebrity experts, which will include choosing the right interior schemes and utilising the very latest colours and materials through to exciting ways to make the most of the space you have indoors and out.

"There is no need to move home, this show will focus on making the very best of what you have. We are sure every visitor will leave the show bursting with ideas and inspiration," said Nick.

"The Great British Home Show will give visitors a fun-packed family day out.

"The show has been designed with a single goal in mind: to create a one-stop-shop for everything to do with the home. It's a 'must-attend' event for anyone with an interest in interiors, gardens, DIY and design."

No small wonder UK gardeners are

By Gary Wright

JAPANESE gardens have evolved since they came to the West 200 years ago and have proved increasingly popular in the UK as they create a calm, tranquil space away from hectic modern life.

These traditional gardens often feature miniature idealised landscapes that can be abstract and highly stylised.

Japanese temple gardens use stone groupings in a 'sea' of raked gravel for Zen meditation, while 'stroll' gardens with lawns and lush planting can be enjoyed by the entire family.

Bonsai enthusiasts plan part of their garden with a Japanese influence to showcase their miniature trees. Whatever the style, though, they all enjoy meticulous attention to detail.

Howard Healey is an award-winning landscaper who also runs Rhino Rock, Europe's most comprehensive Japanese garden centre near Tonbridge.

He will be building a unique Japanese City Courtyard show garden complete with water feature for The Great British Home Show 2012 (at Glow, Bluewater, from Thursday, May 31, to Monday, June 4) which will be displayed among specially-designed gardens on level one, where the Great British Street Party will take place to celebrate the Diamond Jubilee of Queen Elizabeth II.

Mr Healey, who leads this small, family-run business, said: "In 1992 we custom-built a unique Japanese garden and water garden centre to display a comprehensive range of Japanese garden materials, water features and Bonsai trees.

"Our business has grown since then and we are now recognised as one of the premier suppliers of Japanese garden materials.

"A thorough knowledge of the subject, the love of transforming the client's dream into reality, and the quality construction of our gardens is the most satisfying aspect to our work."

In addition, the company imports an attractive range of natural stone products for all genre of garden styles, not just Japanese.

These include granite benches, bridges for water gardens, stepping stones and some unique paving materials.

Many of the designs are exclusive to Rhino Rock and all are hand-carved to very high standards from a 'fine fleck' granite.

The nursery features attractive display gardens to help visitors visualise what can be achieved in small spaces.

All the Japanese lanterns, water basins and water features are tastefully displayed and available for purchase from stock.

Drilled rock water features and an exciting range of exclusive contemporary designs hand-carved in granite can be bought as a DIY kit with all the necessary pumps, hosepipe, pond-liner, water tanks and other accessories.

Mr Healey said: "Our drilled rocks are the most natural of all water features and will add charm to any garden. We drill the rock ourselves and have a huge selection to choose from. "Our innovative lighting options add a sparkle to the water feature at night."

The selection of plants for Japanese gardens includes Acers, bamboo, evergreen shrubs and lovely 'cloud trees' that feature clipped foliage pads from Japan.

Rhino Rock landscaping services offers a fresh approach to Japanese garden design, water gardens and contemporary spaces.

The company caters for everything from small courtyard design to major landscaping projects.

As part of the design service, Mr Healey provides a drawing, with an accurate, written description of the materials and features in the garden design.

turning Japanese

LITTLE GEMS: Meticulous detail goes into planning a Japanese garden

He said: "We charge a design fee and also provide a firm quote for the work to be done."

His small professional team works on your project from conception to construction.

"We go to great lengths to meet the client's requirements, working to ensure that they are pleased upon project completion. We build only one garden at a time and, barring inclement weather, work through from start to finish without interruption," said Mr Healey.

His customer base includes the public, selfbuild developers, interior designers, architects, landscape architects and the building trade.

He said: "We have been importing granite products for many years and use many of them in our Japanese landscaping projects. Our manufacturing partners have been carefully selected to ensure that the granite used and the quality of the goods produced is always of the highest standard."

Many of the products are manufactured to Rhino Rock's own design and are exclusive to the company.

Put your personality up there for all to see with right choice of wallpaper

WALLPAPER in the home is enjoying a surge in popularity as people look to brighten up their décor.

Minimalism was popular for a number of years when it came to interiors, but homeowners are once again embracing colour and vibrancy.

Astra Décor Ltd, of Milton Regis, near Sittingbourne, is Kent's largest specialist wallpaper store and has been established for 40 years.

It has more than 750 designs in stock and there are another 20,000 options available to view in books.

George Miller, who runs the company, said: "What used to be the case is that wallpaper became popular as most homes did not have great walls. As these improved, minimalist designs became popular – but there was also the concept of a 'feature wall'. This is one out of four which is decorated in bright colours and provides a focus for the room.

"Then people started to think 'Maybe the whole room can be vibrant and bright'. So they started to decorate the four walls."

To give customers as wide a range as possible, Astra Décor has stocks from all the main UK and European manufacturers.

Mr Miller said: "We have people coming to us from as far away as Holland, Belgium and France. It's interesting that people use the wallpaper to express part of their personalities – reflecting themselves in their homes.

"Extroverts may choose something which will immediately hit you when you walk into a room, and introverts may prefer something a little more discreet.

"But whatever they want, we will be there to offer advice. I feel that we get so many visitors to our store as wallpaper is a tactile thing.

"As well as seeing it, people want to touch it and get the feel of it."

Making our feathered friends feel at home

ATTRACTING wild birds to a garden is one way of increasing appreciation of the natural world – and there are ways to make your surroundings attractive to different species.

Last year's RSPB Big Garden Birdwatch results showed some of the smaller birds that had decreased in numbers the previous year bounced back. But in the last 30 years many species have been in decline.

Sightings of house sparrows, robins, chaffinches and startings have all declined since 1979, while woodpigeons and collared doves have shown big increases. The problem is that the sheer size of the bigger birds can scare off small birds that venture into gardens.

However, there are specific foods that smaller birds love and you might consider when refilling your bird-feeders; these include such as nyjer and sunflower seeds. Peanuts are rich in fat, but you should never use salted or dry-roasted peanuts, and only buy from a reputable source.

Fat-balls are great for many birds, especially in cold weather, but make sure you remove them from any nylon mesh before putting them out as birds can catch their feet in the mesh.

Live food such as mealworms is relished, but make sure these are fresh.

Of course, your own planting scheme can also go some way to making your garden a haven for birds. A good hedgerow, with a mixture of deciduous trees, shrubs and climbers, will provide birds with both shelter and food.

If you select your bird food carefully, hopefully you'll soon have a host of winged visitors – and not only the large ones – to your garden.

Preparation to make your garden grow

Kent-born and bred, Lucy Hewett grew up on the family farm in Staplehurst. She was always interested in plants and after the birth of her daughter she studied and became RHS-qualified. She now spends her time growing vegetables and flowers from her smallholding in Lynsted near Faversham. Much of her quality produce finds its way to local pubs and restaurants.

OR someone who loves the garden, winter gardening can be a physiological battle. To leave the warmth of the house and get out there can be the hardest thing. However, some of my most productive times have been in the winter.

So I vowed I would not procrastinate this year but instead grasp the nettle (no pun intended) and get ahead with some jobs before the onset of spring. Although the winter is (hopefully) nearing its end, there is still time to prepare.

Bright and breezy

It's not all gloom and doom out there. It's worth venturing out just to see the variety of winter interest around: the fragrant blooms of viburnums, <code>Sarcococca confusa</code> (Christmas box), <code>Lonicera fragrantissima</code> (shrubby honeysuckle), <code>Hamanelis</code> (Chinese witch hazel), <code>Skimmias</code> and the berries of the holly.

The beautiful coloured stems of dogwoods, willows and the polished mahogany bark of the Prunus serrula are at their best at this time of year, not to mention carpets of cyclamen, snowdrops, crocus and aconites to admire.

Assess, reshape and reposition

When the ground is bare in the winter months it's a good time to assess your whole garden. If the ground is not too hard you can reshape beds and reposition dominant features to improve planting schemes.

Structure in the form of trees, shrubs, hedges, walls and fences is so important if you don't want your garden to look lifeless out of season and provide a good background for summer interest.

Evergreens clipped into distinctive shapes give some formality. Use this time to check fences for damage and repair while you are able to get to them to do so.

Tidy and clean

So now's a chance to tackle that pile of seed trays and pots you've been collecting all year.

Give them a brush and wash with a little Jeyes fluid or disinfectant — clean pots means healthy plants. Cloches will also benefit from a wash with soapy water; then pop the cloches over the soil to start warming it in preparation for seed-sowing.

Sweep out the greenhouse and wash down the glass that may have become grubby and renew bubblewrap and capillary matting if necessary.

Clear leaves from paths to avoid slipping on them and from beds and pop them on the compost. Now, doesn't that feel better! Nothing like a bit of order to get you ready for the spring.

Pruning

You can go for years without really needing to do any serious pruning, but roses are one of the things that do need to be pruned yearly.

• Rose-pruning: make sure your secateurs are sharp. Always cut at an angle just above a bud/leaf joint that faces the direction you want the new shoot to grow in, which is generally outwards to avoid crowding the centre of the plant.

Cut out any crossing, dead, damaged or diseased stems. Add some potash around the base also.

• Trees and shrub-pruning: the same applies to any trees of shrubs that need a tidy-up — use long-handled loppers to give you greater leverage on thicker stems and pruning saws for branches. Always cut a branch close but not flush to the trunk or main stem.

Cut back any clematis you have that flowered in late spring or early summer and tie in wayward stems to the main support. Early spring flowering and winter clematis do not need any attention now.

If you are not sure which shrubs can be pruned now, the rule of thumb is: if it flowers before midsummer (mid-June), prune it immediately after flowering and, if it flowers later, prune it in late winter or early spring. You can apply that rule to almost any plant with woody stems.

And next time...

Like the idea of always having a meal available in your garden whenever you want it? Then have a go at growing your own – if you've never tried or if you are already a budding allotment grower next month we will be looking at things to consider when planning a veg patch.

What exactly is it?

The Medway Fair Trader Scheme is a Medway Trading Standards Service initiative. The aim of the scheme is to improve business standards and increase customer confidence in memher businesses. Approved businesses have agreed to abide by the terms and conditions of the scheme and have been checked by Trading Standards to ensure compliance. Each year Medway Council's Trading Standards Service receives in the region of five thousand complaints about businesses in the Medway area. A significant number of these are associated with home improvements. This scheme is a positive move to improve the way in which traders deal with consumers. There is no place in it for roque traders who do not care for customer satisfaction or compliance with the law.

Businesses are demonstrating a commitment to customer care and fair-trading. Trading Standards will continue to work closely with scheme members, and will carry out monitoring exercises to help make sure high standards are maintained. For more information about participating in the Medway Council's fair trader scheme, visit the Website:

www.medway.gov.uk/fairtrader

*NB Approval of a business does not mean that the Trading Standards Service can guarantee its financial stability or has individually checked the quality of any goods or services provided. Trading standards cannot give any quarantee or warranty as to the value for money of goods or services compared with a competitor, or that they will be satisfactory" the way it is, many people are looking to make more out of their current home.

HOMES

Adapt just one wall to add all the extra space you could ever need...

Elephant Windows, with 40 years' experience, is perfectly placed to help people get the most out of their house.

ITH the property market being

The company is part of the prestigious Piper Group, a major contractor and manufacturer of high-quality home improvements for many local authorities.

Many Elephant customers have realised they don't have to go to specialist design companies and pay extortionate prices for their orangery.

"Here at Elephant we can design, manufacture and build bespoke conservatories and orangeries that exactly meet our customers' demands," said a spokesman for Elephant's in-house CAD design team.

Elephant has been offering a full service to their customers throughout Kent for their conservatories for 40 years, a service that is now offered to all orangery customers, from initial consultation, survey, CAD drawings, planning and manufacture to installation, all free of charge.

The business can even deal with obtaining

The business can even deal with obtaining planning permission through the Elephant Windows planning consultant, giving a holistic service from start to finish, with satisfaction guaranteed, so making it easy to get that extra room customers have always wanted.

The contemporary orangeries from Elephant are entirely bespoke and an ideal way to introduce more space without having to sacrifice any of the garden.

Choosing a wall of Elephant's bi-folding aluminium doors means the space has a dual function: close them and customers gain an indoor dining room, playroom or kitchen; leave them open and the garden becomes an extension of the home's living space.

They are also ideal for entertaining, especially in the summer, when doors can be left open, making for a seamless transition between home and garden, enabling a party or other social event to spill out of the house into the sunshine, maximising space while at the same time providing elegance to an existing home.

Conservatories are another great way to give the home that all-important light and airy feeling.

A place to relax with large windows, they allow a view out to the garden, increasing the feeling of space in the home and making a connection between the interior and exterior space.

With the addition of plants and carefullyarranged furniture, they can add markedly to the style and individuality of any home as well as considerably increasing its value. Addition of a drinks cabinet is always

Addition of a drinks cabinet is always welcome, especially when the room is used for entertaining guests, and a dining table can be used to give something of an alfresco feel to meals taken in the room rather than in a more formal home setting.

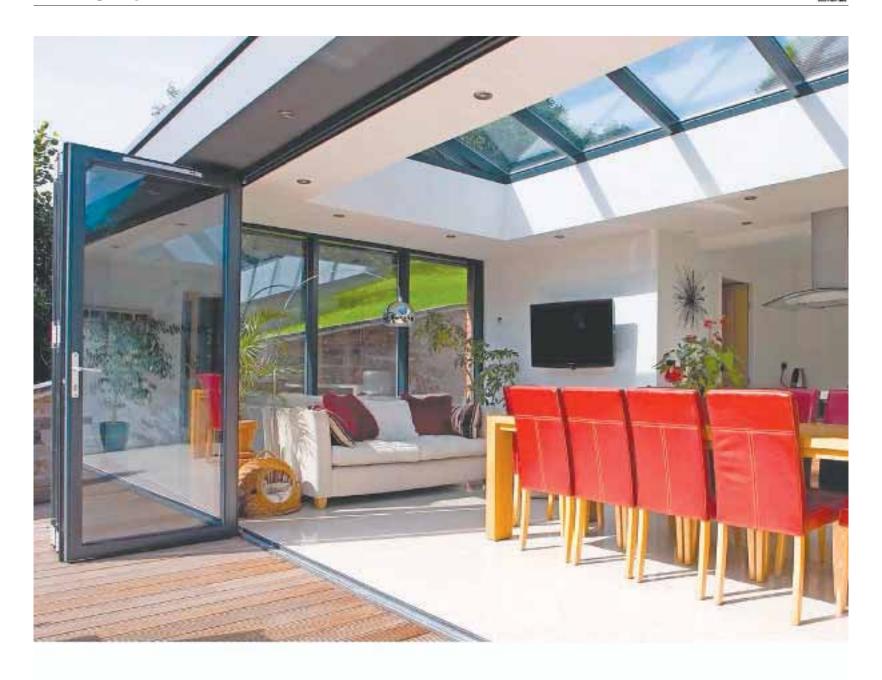

■ All Elephant staff are experts at understanding and delivering what you want to make your house the home of your dreams. For more information or a free quotation about the design excellence, you can phone Elephant on 0800 195 0000 or visit www.elephantwindows.co.uk.

Stamp-duty holiday pushes sales up

HOUSE sales in the South East edged up slightly during January as an increased number of first-time buyers looked to beat the stamp-duty holiday, which expires in March, says the latest RICS UK Housing Market survey.

A total of 14 per cent more surveyors across the region reported rises rather than falls in newly-agreed sales since the beginning of the year. From Saturday, March 24, first-time buyers will no longer be exempt from stamp duty on properties under £250,000 and some surveyors note this has produced an increase in activity at the lower end of the market.

In light of this, respondents in the region were optimistic about prospects in the near term, as a net balance of 27 per cent of surveyors predicted transaction levels to pick up over the coming three months. This represents the strongest reading since June 2011.

optimism, prices across the region continued to drop, albeit moderately, with 16 per cent more surveyors reporting price falls rather than rises.

Looking ahead, while a cautious optimism surrounds future transaction levels, the same cannot be said for future prices. A net balance of 5 per cent more surveyors expect prices to continue falling over the coming three months.

Special offer to help you to get on the property ladder

By Nick Ames

MOAT, the Government-appointed Local Home-Buy Agent for Kent, is running an exclusive short-term promotion on a range of sharedownership homes across the county.

Shared ownership is a way to get started in the housing market. Also known as part buy/part rent, this Government-funded initiative helps first-time buyers purchase a share in a new home, with a subsidised low rent payable on the remaining share.

At a later stage, a shared owner can purchase further shares in their home until they own it outright; this is known as staircasing and allows first-time buyers to work their way up to 100 per cent ownership in their own time, when they can afford it.

Moat is also giving first-time buyers the opportunity to win £300 in Bluewater shopping vouchers if they purchase one of these homes by Friday, March 23.

Many shared-ownership homes come with a range of white goods, which cuts down on added expenses. Better still, first-time buyers can take advantage of the Government's Stamp Duty holiday if they buy a home before Saturday, March 24.

There are some wonderful properties featuring in this promotion, the company says. At St Mary's Island, Chatham Maritime, Moat is offering a three-bedroom house from just £64,500 for a 30 per cent share, and a two-bedroom, first-floor apartment for £54,000 for a 30 per cent share. In Minster, first-time buyers can buy 25 per cent of a three-bedroom house at Spencers Park for just £41,250.

For apartments with excellent international rail links to London and Europe, the new Stanhope in Ashford offers 25 per cent of a one-bedroom apartment for £18,750. Alternatively, Waterstone Park in Greenhithe has a final onebedroom, second-floor apartment available for £45,000 for a 30 per cent share.

Shared-ownership homes require smaller deposits. Purchasers need just a deposit on the share they wish to buy, not the total value of the property.

More information on this promotion, as well as property details and eligibility criteria, can be found at www.moat.co.uk/loveyourhome.

Alternatively, Paula Turner at Moat will answer questions by email on paula.turner@ moat.co.uk, or you can phone 0845 3596387.

CHAP L PLACE LIMITED

Land Agents

Chapel Place Limited are a specialist land consultancy with many years' experience in the sale and acquisition of land and development opportunities in the South East. With the aid of our architects and planning advisors we have assisted many clients in obtaining planning permissions even in the most complex situations. Through our network of associated offices, we have one of the largest databases of developers and self builders looking for a variety of sites over several counties. We would be pleased to ascertain the potential of your land and advise you of the most appropriate method of sale and look forward to hearing from you if we can be of assistance! Our specialist site finding services has proved to be particularly popular and successful and we are pleased to share with you our latest success story with pictures of before and after. Our clients, Mike and Janey, commented after the site finding exercise "Chapel Place played an essential role in the acquisition of our wonderful plot of land in the Sussex Downs by personally visiting locations on our behalf due to our geographic circumstances. We really appreciated the services of Andrea and Steve with their expertise, local knowledge and with their 'finger on the pulse' in all of our areas of choice. They were punctual in reporting back with photos and recommendations from local estate agents on availability and values and we would highly recommend their services over any of the conventional land and estate agents"

"WHO are those guys?" is the question posed in that classic Western, Butch Cassidy And The Sundance Kid, as the two heroes look back at their relentless and ever-more threatening pursuers.

It's a question European carmakers may ask, too, as they check out the threat from Hyundai's second-generation i30 five-door family hatchback arriving in March.

Not only is it with us just five years after the original – European marques generally follow a seven-year model replacement cycle – but the i30 looks like a quantum leap ahead of its by no means mundane predecessor.

The styling is far crisper and, in line with the i40 family model that wowed us last year, the cabin is far superior in style, design and quality to what has gone before – Hyundai is on a roll here and that is starting to show in stronger second-hand values.

I'm willing to bet the driving experience won't be quite on a par with the excellent Ford Focus, VW Golf and Vauxhall Astra, but the Hyundai will be backed by the Korean marque's famous five-year/unlimited-mileage warranty, which is a powerful persuader in gloomy economic times and good for resale as well as a sign of confidence in your own products.

For those who have no intention of pushing their precious family motor to silly limits, then, the good-looking Hyundai could seem a better proposition than the European trio.

Shrewd buyers may also be tempted by the fact that all of the 1.6CRDi diesel manual versions come with Hyundai's Blue Drive eco technologies as standard, offering road taxexempt CO₂ emissions of 97g/km on the lowest output 110PS (109bhp) version and pound-stretching economy without compromising on low-down power output.

The new generation i30 will be available in four main trim levels – Classic, Active, Style and Style Nav – with an entry-level 1.4-litre petrol option from £14,495 as well as the diesel (from £16,895) mentioned earlier.

New standard features on the i30 include voice-activated Bluetooth connectivity, LED daytime running lights, multi-function steering wheel for audio and other controls and electrically-adjustable and heated door mirrors. Mid-range Active trim (from £15,595) includes alloys, cruise control, rear parking sensors and Hyundai's new dynamic Flex Steer system.

Trading up to Style models (from £16,595), though, brings the sort of luxuries that would cost far more with other marques, such as 16-inch alloys, dual-zone climate control, front parking sensors, rain-sensing wipers, cornering lights, automatic headlights, automatic de-fog system for front windscreen and electricallyfolding door mirrors with LED indicators.

Topping the range is Style Nav, which brings a touch-screen satellite navigation system and rear-view parking camera.

X1 marks the crossover spot as BMW drives for perfection

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

WHO would have thought, just a few years ago, that BMW would make such a success out of producing 4x4s and SUVs?

After all, we are talking about the legendary producer of sharp handling conventional cars the premium purveyor of the 'Ultimate Driving Machine', to quote the marque's famous marketing slogan.

What could such people want with clumsy, lumpy almost oafish 4x4s?

Except that BMW has, more than any other marque, turned the 4x4 image on its head, first with the big yet nimble X5 and then with a whole family of high-riding 4x4s that recognise how top quality road manners come first with offroad ability thrown in afterwards.

Of course, the off-road power has sometimes come a distant second – as in the case of the first generation X3 - while the X6 4x4 coupé is something of a contradiction in terms.

However, the X-Series has gone from being a novelty turn to one of BMW's main players.

Which brings us to the youngest and smallest member and also the odd one out in the German marque's four-model X line-up
That's because it's available with rear-wheel drive only if required, adding to the overall X1 proposition as a premium cheap-to-run off-roader style car.

This appeal also takes it into crossover territory, the glamorous new niche exposed by the Nissan Qashqai and now fast becoming a bestselling sector in the UK.

What crossovers have done is shown that chunky high-riding cars are perfectly acceptable in all walks of life and, in doing so, have made inroads into family hatchback and MPV sales.

And the X1 has all of that crowd-pleasing versatility, too, with a high driving position, butch styling and a versatile five-door body.

Being the most compact X-series car it's also home in the tighter confines of the town and city. BMW has adopted a down-to-earth approach to marketing the car, too, with just one powertrain, a 2.0-litre turbodiesel with six-speed manual 'box as standard, but it's available with four different outputs.

The six-speed manual gearbox and BMW's standard EfficientDynamics economy package also enables the car to average around 50mpg – not bad for a sporting all-wheel drive crossover vehicle.

And, of course, being a BMW means it toes the line literally on driving and handling, aided and abetted by well-ordered ratios on the gearbox. It is quite astonishing in fact to feel how flat

Though you sit higher, you really do feel that you could be in the marque's best-selling 3-Series, although not so surprising since the X1 is based upon the same platform.

the car remains on corners rather than healing over in the more typical 4x4/SUV fashion.

As you might expect, such grip and serenity comes as the price of a slightly harder ride, though it's not awful and the X1 cruises with refinement on the motorway.

It is the smallest of the X-Series so you wouldn't expect great roominess, but the only black mark is against the middle rear seat where legroom either side of the transmission hump is a bit tight.

Headroom in the back is excellent though and boot and cargo capacity is similarly impressive, especially once the split/folding rear seats are flat to the floor.

As expected from BMW, the dashboard is has a logical and driver-pleasing style, even though the quality of the materials is not quite up to the usual standard.

Gordini shows it's a real deal for Renault

1ST DRIVE

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

HERE'S a bit of fun...

Renault has made its sporty Clio Gordini sub-brand more affordable and sensible without dulling the entertainment value.

The 200bhp two-litre Clio Gordini (£19,870) flagship is pitched a little too high for most pockets and confusingly close to Renault's out-and-out sporting brand. Renaultsport, but the French marque has now produced two budget versions wearing the evocative twin-stripe Gordini label made famous in the 1950s and 1960s on competition cars prepared by Amédée

The Sorceror Gordini. A 128bhp 1.6-litre petrol version is the new Clio Gordini entry model at £14,000, and joined by the car reviewed here, featuring a 106bhp 1.5-litre diesel and priced at £14,950.

Normally, diesels don't sit comfortably in superminis since the extra weight of the engine often dulls the handling, but that isn't the case here and the diesel (11.1 seconds) is only a couple of seconds slower on the 0-62mph dash than its 1.6 petrol sister (9.3 seconds).

But where it really scores is with an average mpg in the 60s rather than the 40s for the petrol car and, with not so ridiculous group 16 insurance, that makes it a sensible commuter car that's also stylish and fun enough to blow away the gloom of our straitened times.

 \overrightarrow{Or} course, it looks the part with its Gordini stripes from nose to tail, two-tone alloys and twin exhaust and Renault has done well to spark up the interior with sumptuous two-tone leather seats – a £750 option.

It would have been nice though to have some colour-co-ordinated seat belts in the style of 1980s hot hatches.

And the overall Clio dashboard and interior trim is now looking a bit low rent in high specification models like this.

But, hey, this is a well-priced sporty yet practical car wearing a star name, and is worth a second look.

A1 marks for being green

BEING seen to be green is becoming increasingly important for some people and, if they can be seen in something chic and stylish, then so much the better.

It's one reason why BMW's low-emission, road-tax-exempt Mini D has become the biggest-seller in the line-up by a long way.

But now there's competition, from the ultra green version of Audi's would-be Mini basher, the A1 hatch.

Like many eco warrior motors, the A1 103bhp 1.6TDl has had its powertrain tweaked to cut CO2 emissions below the payable level for road tax – it emits just 99g/km of CO2 – without taking too much away from flexibility. It should also average around 70mpg.

Admittedly, if you do wish to be a motoring contradiction though and drive this eco model hard then you may find it wanting in acceleration and a bit loud – the sporty and firm S Line suspension on the test car seemed a bit contradictory, too.

Driven sensibly though and this A1 shows that you can have a good environmental conscience and still drive and arrive in style.

Of course, it helps that the car is impeccably constructed – though its Mini arch-rival does not go wanting here either – and cuts a premium dash

Interior quality and layout is classy, durable and stylish, and prices start at a not unreasonable £14,480.

Start speccing up with other premium goodies though and, like the Mini, you'll be gulping for air – the flagship S line test car had various extras adding up to a total bill of £ 22,545 that looks a bit steep for a three-door supermini.

Stick with the cheaper and less tautlysprung versions, though, and enjoy making your environmental statement.

THE FIAT SOO TWINAIR IS A SUPERSTAR THAT PERFORMS FOR SURPRISINGLY LITTLE.

IF the new car market is any barometer, then the UK economy is already starting to turn around.

Demand for new cars in 2011 managed to defy the worst industry predictions; though the 1.94 million registrations was still down 4.4 per cent on 2010, it was far better than the gloomy 1.92 million forecast.

The supplier of those figures and motor industry mouthpiece, the SMMT (Society of Motors Manufacturers and Traders), still expects a tough 2012, but chief executive Paul Everitt said: "Record numbers of new and updated models, significantly improved fuel efficiency and exciting new technologies will help to encourage consumers into cal and money-saving developments, people are buying because running a newer car can save money, while leaving it in a savings account makes hardly anything.

Fuel-sipping diesel and alternatively fuelled cars both took record market shares in 2011 as average new car CO2 emissions fell to a new low of 138.1g/km, down 4.2 per cent on the 2010 level, while low emission cars qualify for road tax exemption or very low rates.

You can also make savings on a new '12 registration plate car from March 1 by driving a hard bargain with manufacturers and forecourts that are keen to deal and prepared to discount against the list prices.

Get a realistic valuation on your old car too, since used car values are buoyant due to the lower number of new cars sold since the recession hit in 2007, meaning fewer used cars in circulation to soak up demand from that sector

Other buyer incentives out there include tempting finance packages or personal leases – which banks aren't keen to match – insurance and servicing.

There are also outstanding warranties available such as Kia's seven-year/100,000-mile package, Vauxhall's Lifetime package and Hyundai's five-year/

mileage deal. And servicing deals can be very cost-effective, so ask about those.

Diesels may have won over many skeptics with their economy and good low-down power delivery, but petrol is making a strong case too now: petrol fuel should remain more affordable than diesel simply because of the way UK oil refining capacity is geared.

Petrol engines are also cheaper and lighter, and while they still cannot compete on absolute economy against diesels, you need to be a high mileage user to recoup the higher upfront cost of the latter. A lighter engine saves wear on the front tyres and mechanicals too.

Small and efficient turbocharged petrol units also make a difference in small cars — they are nimbler and nicer to drive — and road tax and emissions for petrol engines are both getting better.

Thinking small makes sense when buying new SMALL-MINDEDNESS is really sensible when buying a car nowadays.

Two decades ago the family saloon Ford Mondeo type car dominated, thanks to the company car culture.

Then came the rise of the family hatchback and supermini; throughout the 90s and early Noughties they had a ding-dong battle for market leadership.

However, soaring fuel and insurance costs, greater environmental awareness, punitive road tax on larger cars, and ever more stylish small car designs, have enabled superminis to take some 40 per cent of sales if you include the even smaller city car segment. Even family hatch-backs had to settle for the number two spot with around 25 per cent of registrations.

More difficult to quantify though is the trend towards 'crossovers' – cars like the Kia Sportage, Hyundai ix-35 and Citroën C3 Picasso.

As the name implies they straddle several sectors including family hatchback, MPV (multipurpose vehicle) or people carrier and SUV (sports utility vehicle) and are hard to pigeonhole under current classifications.

But these 'Swiss Army Knives' of the market are here to stay judging by the numbers being sold

SIZE MATTERS: Toyota's allnew Verso-S, far left, offers people-carrier design and supermini flexibility

FRENCH CHIC: Crossover flexibility, above, with Gallic style – the Citroën C3 Picasso

STYLISH: Would it be so hard to downsize from your family motor into a sporty Vauxhall Astra GTC, pictured left?

Now it's so much easier to get into a Mercedes-Benz van, with up to £2,000* towards your deposit when you sign up to a Mercedes-Benz Vito or Sprinter on finance.

Important dos and don'ts before buying a new car

DON'T accept the first deal on offer – be ready to haggle.

DON'T be afraid to ask for trimmings like a tank of fuel, car mats or further discounts or extras.

DON'T fall for what seems like a big bargain before you even haggle. It could be an unpopular engine or trim combination or a car on 'run-out' where production ceased a while ago – it might be just as thirsty as your old car and will depreciate badly.

pick a model that saves fuel, insurance, road tax and depreciation – it won't get any easier out there.

be blinded by road tax-exempt, but expensive diesel eco models – check price, running costs, green credentials and the savings over your planned ownership mileage/ years, then compare against the closest standard version.

DON'T assume that diesel will save – you usually pay more upfront and the engines are generally heavier, which means more wear on front tyres and mechanicals. The fuel is also dearer at the pumps, while petrol car economy and emissions have improved and they are often nicer to drive.

CROSSOVER STYLE: Toyota's sporty RAV4 is a star of the SUV sector while one of the best-looking supermini estates has to be Seat's stylish Ibiza ST

BIG VIEW: Cab view of the Mercedes-Benz Vito – designed for driver comfort as well as efficiency and long-term reliability for the operator

Extra appeal of new vans

DESIGNING a van still requires a box for cargo, but everything else has been revolutionised in a decade.

Operators have seen economy, efficiency and flexibility soar, while drivers now get better performance, refinement and safety.

Initially, this benefited car-derived models and included air con and a decent sound system, but the philosophy has since migrated to larger vans.

The range of van capacities has also widened, varying from as little as three cubic metres for a car-derived hatchback used for courier work or company runabouts, right up to a 17-cubic-metre delivery van.

Access has improved too. Many larger vans have low floors in the driving compartment for easy access and most vehicles above the supermini class now come with at least one sliding door as standard to aid loading – many buyers take the option of a second 'slider'.

There is now a choice usually of side-opening twin rear doors or a high lift tailgate as well, while cab doors generally have a reduced opening angle, with the double benefit of making it easy for a busy driver to grab the handle to close the door and also avoid it swinging wide and hitting something.

And petrol driven vans have been displaced by the better economy, range and low down pulling power of diesels.

Extended service periods, lower maintenance costs and longer lasting parts then compound diesel operating benefits.

Gearboxes have also changed. A six-speed manual gearbox is the standard – two cogs better than only a few years ago – but urban operators are turning increasingly to automatic, semi-automatic or clutch-less transmissions. These can usually be driven with manual selection anyway, but are ideal for the stop-start urban traffic conditions and can be as economical as a manual.

Fuel consumption in MPG 0/100km for Hyundai carge: Urban 252 (11.2) – 68.9 (4.1), Extra Urban 38.7 (7.3) – 80.7 (3.5), Continent 32.1 (8.8) – 76.4 (3.7), CO, Emissions 23.1 – 99 g/km.

HERE IS THE HUES: Red has fallen in popularity but suits a sporty shape such as the new Kia Rio supermini, which can carry it off, whereas blue was No 3 in an industry colour poll and suits Toyota's Yaris RESTRAIN yourself when choosing the colour or added bling for your new '12 reg motor that's the advice of the experts.

For you may want sell on at some stage and, like those hideous 70s bathroom suites, find that 'acid green' and 'latte brown' is not to everyone's taste, though wild colours can suit certain cars: Seat has used red, blue, yellow and white to great effect on its sporty little numbers, while Honda has also been adventurous with red and yellow on its Civic and Jazz models.

Go easy on the colour

And playing safe can be a turn-off to would-be buyers too, so here a colour league table from the SMMT - the motor trade body - plus some pros and cons:

1) Black (24.7 per cent) is the perennial favourite but looks dirty quickly and shows little scratches or the swirling effect from over-use of mechanical car washes.

- 2) Silver (21.4) is still riding high and hides scratches and carwash abrasion well, but is increasingly seen as the boring or safe option.
- 3)Blue (16.5) is conservative yet smart, but very dark blue is best avoided.

- 4)Grey Metallic (14.4) more assertive and upmarket than silver?
- 5) Red (10.2) had fallen away due to a tendency to go pinker with age, but better finishes and use on sportier models has helped stabilise figures.
- 6) White (10) has shot back up the charts: it's usually a no-cost option, handles wear and tear well and also reflects the heat.

Also-rans: Green (1.1), Beige (0.9), Yellow (0.4) and Brown (0.4)

More motorists are buying into 'green' savings

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

CARE for the environment can be a good enough reason for buying a greener car.

But many buyers now realize that care for the wallet is another, with many new models not only helping to offset ever-rising fuel bills, but also lowering or even removing road tax bills altogether.

The latest tax bandings range from zero for those cars with the lowest CO_2 emissions right up to £950 a year for gas guzzling limos or 4x4s.

Of course, anyone spending £50,000-£100,000 on a new motor won't worry about small change like that, but most people like saving a few quid on their fuel and tax while, incidentally, doing their bit for the environment.

Longer term, electric cars may be the answer and there has been much publicity about 'plug-in' models for overnight charging at home or city centre charging points.

But battery technology has some catching up to do and the zero emissions argument is misleading. Until we have zero emission power stations, electric cars simply transfer the CO2 and noxious gas output from exhaust pipe to belching chimney.

Production of hydrogen to power our cars raises a similar dilemma.

So, are hybrids the answer, then?

Japanese giants Toyota and Honda lead here, pairing conventional engines with electric power and batteries.

But hybrids tend to be dearer upfront so the internal combustion 'lump' still has a part to play

TOP BUYS: The Lexus CT200h, above, is currently the only small executive hybrid car; Hyundai's classy i40 Tourer is available in eco-friendly Blue Drive now that its emissions are plummeting, economy soaring, and refinement improving.

In fact, things are moving so fast that you marvel at what some legislative prods have achieved.

The downsizing phenomenon is well under way, too, with several new cars proving that 'small is beautiful'. Most carmakers also now have an 'eco' sub brand such as Vauxhall's Ecoflex, Hyundai's Blue Drive models and Kia's Ecodynamics range.

But they often don't come cheap either, so weigh potential long-term savings against upfront cost; if you don't cover the miles, conventional alternatives may be a better bet.

Don't ignore petrol models either; the higher price of diesel cars and the fuel at the pumps must be compared with new small capacity low emission/consumption petrol engines.

SPECIAL REPORT

The mysterious case of why the county struggles to produce England stars

By Fred Atkins

sports@kosmedia.co.uk

FOR the first time ever this summer, Kent could punch above its weight at football's European Championships, with two of the 23-man squad likely to be from the county.

On current form, Liverpool's Glen Johnson, and Manchester United's Chris Smalling are both expected to be selected by whichever manager the FA next decides to throw £6 million a year at.

While both were born in Greenwich, they were predominantly raised in Kent, with Johnson going to the Leigh Academy in Dartford and Smalling attending Chatham Grammar School.

The population of England is approximately 51 million, of whom around 1.6 million, a little over three percent, live in Kent yet historically the county hasn't produced top-flight footballers in anything like the numbers needed to make a regular contribution to the England team.

The last great hope, the Maidstone-born Jon Harley, made 42 appearances for Chelsea, without ever making the anticipated breakthrough at the highest level. He's had a respectable career and a scattering of others are in the professional ranks, like Snodland's Paul Jones at Peterborough, or Maidstone's Doug Loft at Port Vale. But Kent undoubtedly underachieves.

Glenn Aitken, a former Wimbledon player who went on to become chief executive at Gravesend & Northfleet, and now coaches Kent's under-15s, believes too many players are put off by their experiences with big clubs.

"I've thought long and hard about this and had the debate with various people," he said. "The system breaks down between the schools and the professional clubs. The professional clubs are keen to get their hands on the talented players as early as possible, but they're equally keen to get rid of them six weeks or two years later. There's not a smooth transition and I see a lot of talent wasted."

Not everyone copes with the rejection.

"At the games I manage there are scouts from Chelsea, Aston Villa and Fulham," Aitken said. "(But) playing for Kent has lost some of the esteem it used to have. People used to aspire to play for Kent but now they're sold on the idea of joining a professional club as soon as possible. Once they're ditched they tend not to comeback.

"We are producing players of quality like Chris Smalling which proves it's not essential to go with the pro clubs but it is important to get good quality coaching.

Smalling's climb from Maidstone United, via Fulham, to champions United in the space of just a handful of years, has been often been cited how top talent can be spotted, nurtured and capitalised on

Yet Aitken believes clubs are looking at players with technical ability at an early age to the exclusion of those who could still develop.

"A lot of players have the will to win but at 13 or 14 or even eight or nine they may not have the skills," he said. "Professional clubs go for the players who have the skills but may not have the will to win.'

That could be attributed to Kent being a predominantly middle class county. England internationals come from overwhelmingly working class backgrounds and while it's something of a cliché to say that players from wealthy backgrounds lack incentives, the question of hunger is valid according to Chatham Town's Keith Levett, who is heavily involved in player development around the county and also runs Welling United's academy.

"There's no one reason why Kent doesn't produce so many top players," he said. "There are lots of factors but one is that Kent is quite an affluent county. I'm not saying there aren't deprived areas because there are, but players (in Kent) tend to come from well-off backgrounds.

It's also possible that we don't really have a marquee club to attract the talent. We've got Gillingham and Maidstone's a massive town that might start producing players when the new stadium gets built, but players often get mopped up by London clubs."

If Kent produced a number of internationals proportionate to its population it would contribute one player to the England squad for three out of every four major tournaments, but Johnson's selection for South Africa 2010 was the first time a player with anything other than a tenuous connection to the county had even come close to a call-up since Yalding's David Sadler was left out of Alf Ramsey's final squad for Mexico in 1970.

Paradoxically every Republic of Ireland squad for a major tournament has included at least one Kent-born player.

St Paul's Cray's Tony Cascarino, Maidstoneborn Andy Townsend and former Maidstone and Gillingham defender Gary Breen all won international call-ups.

HORSE RACING

York double pulls in crowds at Point-to-Point

IT may not come with quite the glitz and glamour associated with the 'sport of kings' but the ever popular Charing Point-to-Point meeting last weekend still pulls in the crowds.

The popular meeting took place last Sunday with punters enjoying a packed card.

And it was a late double from Phil York which proved the highlight.

York brought the event to a close by taking the fifth race on the 4-1 shot Ringa Bay, then the sixth on the 6-1 Encatadora, beating a trio of fancied horses by six clear lengths.

The meeting began with Will Hickman riding the evens favourite Mr Maybe to victory, ahead of the 2-1 Chosen Few, in the first race, the Gill Jarvis Memorial.

James Tudor then took the 7-4 joint-favourite Harbour Court to first place in the Members Restricted Race, but riding Bon Accord he was beaten into third by the 14-1 shot Master T in the next race, the Shepherd Neame Open, which Master T, ridden by Peter Bull, won by three lengths from Man from Moscow.

Claire Douglas took the Jeffrey and Penny Peate Ladies Open on the 5-2 Tom's Toybox, ahead of Frankie Hickman on Knock on the Head and Gemma Cobb's Master Alf, who pipped the favourite Horner Woods for third spot.

The next South East Area point-topoint event in Kent is at Penshurst on March 17

ATHLETICS

Kelly sprinkles gold dust on half-marathon runners

By Fred Atkins

sports@kosmedia.co.uk

DOUBLE Olympic heroine Dame Kelly Holmes will once again fire the gun at the Tunbridge Wells Half-Marathon this Sunday, waving off a record number of runners from the start line.

Dame Kelly, who grew up in nearby Hildenborough, said she was only too happy to be asked to start her "home" race again, having had the honour for the past two years.

"I have lived in Kent all my life, so I'm delighted to support this local sporting event," she said. "I've always enjoyed the Tunbridge Wells Half-Marathon.

"It's fantastic that so many local runners take part and I'm really looking forward to the 2012 event

"It's a great way of getting local people fit and active.

"The Tunbridge Wells Half-Marathon is going to give a fantastic boost to the town and really help my charity, the Dame Kelly Holmes Legacy Trust, continue to benefit local people."

Race organisers were equally delighted that Dame Kelly, who won gold in the 1,500m and 800m at the Athens Olympics in 2004, agreed to start the event and hand out prizes afterwards.

'We are thrilled to have the support of Dame Kelly again," race organiser Sarah Ruseell said. "She is an inspiration to everyone and all the runners love her.

"We are honoured to have her presence at the event and her ongoing and loyal support of local sport is just fantastic."

A record 2,800 runners have now signed up to take part, with around 2,200 expected to start, according to the host club, Tunbridge

Wells Harriers, who are staging the event for the 29th time

Dame Kelly will be assisted by the Paralympics world record holder for the half-marathon, Richard Whitehead, who has run at Tunbridge Wells twice before, but misses out this year because he's concentrating on preparations for the 200m at the London Paralympics.

Race sponsors Lifestyle Renault are offering £1,000 for the first runner to break the course record

The men's record has stood since 1999 when Barry Royden posted 65.33.

None of the British runners are expected to beat that mark on Sunday, but the favourite, the Ethopian Yared Hagos, has an outside chance.

Hagos, who is currently representing Wallsend Harriers in Northumberland, recently completed the Great North Run in 63:30.

His main rival is expected to be last year's winner Andy Greenleaf, while the women's favourite is last year's second place finisher, the British international Helen Decker (now Davis) from Ipswich Jaffa.

Her target is Liz Yelling's record from last year of 73.56.

The race gets under way at 10am.

The route follows previous years - a loop through Bidborough, Penshurst, Fordcombe and Langton Green.

There will be disruptions to motorists as a result of the race, as roads are partially closed to allow the competitors to pass.

FOOTBALL

One step forward, two steps back as injuries blight Wells

IT'S been a week to forget for Tunbridge Wells, after successive defeats at the Culverden forced them to revise their hopes of challenging the leaders of the Kent League Premier Division.

The Wells travel to Erith & Belvedere on Saturday, trying to regain some momentum after they were beaten 3-0 by Erith Town last Saturday, before suffering a 2-0 reverse to VCD Athletic on Tuesday night, leaving them seventh in the table.

Tom Davey and Gary Clarke are both doubtful after picking up knocks in the VCD defeat and manager Martin Larkin was left rueing the length of the injury list.

"It feels like one step forward, two steps back at the minute," he told his club's website.

"We get Tom Davey, Carl Cornell, Andy Irvine and Jon Pilbeam back in the squad, but then lose Lewis Mingle and Andy McMath before the game and Tom and Gary Clarke during the game.

"We are almost in March and we are still to have everyone available to select from on a match day this season.

DOUBTFUL: Clarke may miss out

"It's very frustrating but all the other teams I suspect are in the same boat."

The Wells lost 1-0 at home to Erith & Belvedere earlier in the season, having played most of the game with ten men after Gary Clarke was shown a straight red card in the fourth minute.

Gwinnett back as squad hunt for essential victory

AT the third time of asking Tunbridge Wells hope to take on Heathfield & Waldron at St. Marks this Saturday, in a game that could be crucial to their chances of avoiding relegation from London 2 South East.

Guy Lavery is the only absentee from the squad, as he remains on international duty with the England deaf rugby team, although Ben Heenan has now left the club after accepting a new job in Australia.

The Wells are otherwise at full strength.

James Gwinnett emerged unscathed from the second team's 66-5 rout of Old Elthamians and his man-of-the-match display earns him a recall for Saturday's derby

Mark Wilson moves to scrumhalf with Cam Corcoran at fly-half, and Ollie Lewis-Donaldson returns from university.

"In terms of selection we couldn't be happier," chairman Roger Clarke said.

"Heathfield have lost eight or nine in a row and although they've all been fairly close they still haven't won for a while and as they're only four points in front of us we want to pull those back, particularly as Deal & Betteshanger beat Lewes last week."

The twice-postponed match will kick-off at the earlier than usual time of 2pm to allow both sides the chance to watch England's Six Nations match with Wales.

It gets under way at 4pm and shown on big screens in the clubhouse afterwards.

FOCUS WITH FRED ATKINS

Non-league's great leveller

THE words 'literary classic' and 'Kettering Town' aren't destined to appear in the same sentence too often, but Steve Pitts' "39 Days with Gazza" deserves a better fate than the bargain bucket of a Kent bookstore.

The tale of Paul Gascoigne's doomed foray into management, one of the best books written in the admittedly limited field of non-league football literature, is now on sale for just £1.99.

Pitts was the sports editor of a local paper in 2005 when a tip-off came through that Gascoigne was about to be made manager of Kettering Town.

In Kent a handful of former internationals have flirted with local clubs, but none ever had Gascoigne's stature in the game.

The most recent example was Michael Hughes' abortive takeover at Sitting-bourne. The former Northern Ireland international's interest was genuine enough, but when he realised how much money he could blow just getting the Brickies out of the Ryman League he backed off.

The highest profile managers at Kent clubs in the past decade were Terry Yorath at Margate and Neville Southall at Dover, but neither succeeded, partly because topflight footballers seldom adapt to the realities of the non-league game.

Kettering's previous chairman, Peter Mallinger, bankrolled the Poppies to the eye-watering tune of £100,000 a year, having rescued them after Mark English, who'd once made an abortive attempt to buy Maidstone United, took them into administration

This is the kind of money clubs spend just to tread water, but occasionally a businessman who's done well in a different field believes he possesses the genius to buck this trend.

Their first move is often to recruit a high-profile figurehead, as Ashford tried with Rodney Marsh and later Ian Wright.

Mallinger's successor, Imraan Ladak, chooses Gascoigne, but unlike Marsh and Wright, neither of whom could have cared less about Ashford, Gazza actually cares too much.

His body no longer enables him to do the only thing he's ever wanted to, play football. The next best thing is management, but he puts himself under so much pressure it exacerbates his alcoholism.

Gascoigne drinks in the boardroom, he drinks in the dressing room, he falls off the team coach.

After 39 days he's fired and never manages again.

If the story doesn't quite live up to its publishers' billing as being "on a par with The Damned United" it's infinitely better value than Ashley Cole's My Defence, which (for research purposes) I ordered from Amazon for 1p and is magnificently

And I wouldn't even bet 1p against a Kent club employing a "legend" in the next decade and living to regret it
